1984 BEACON

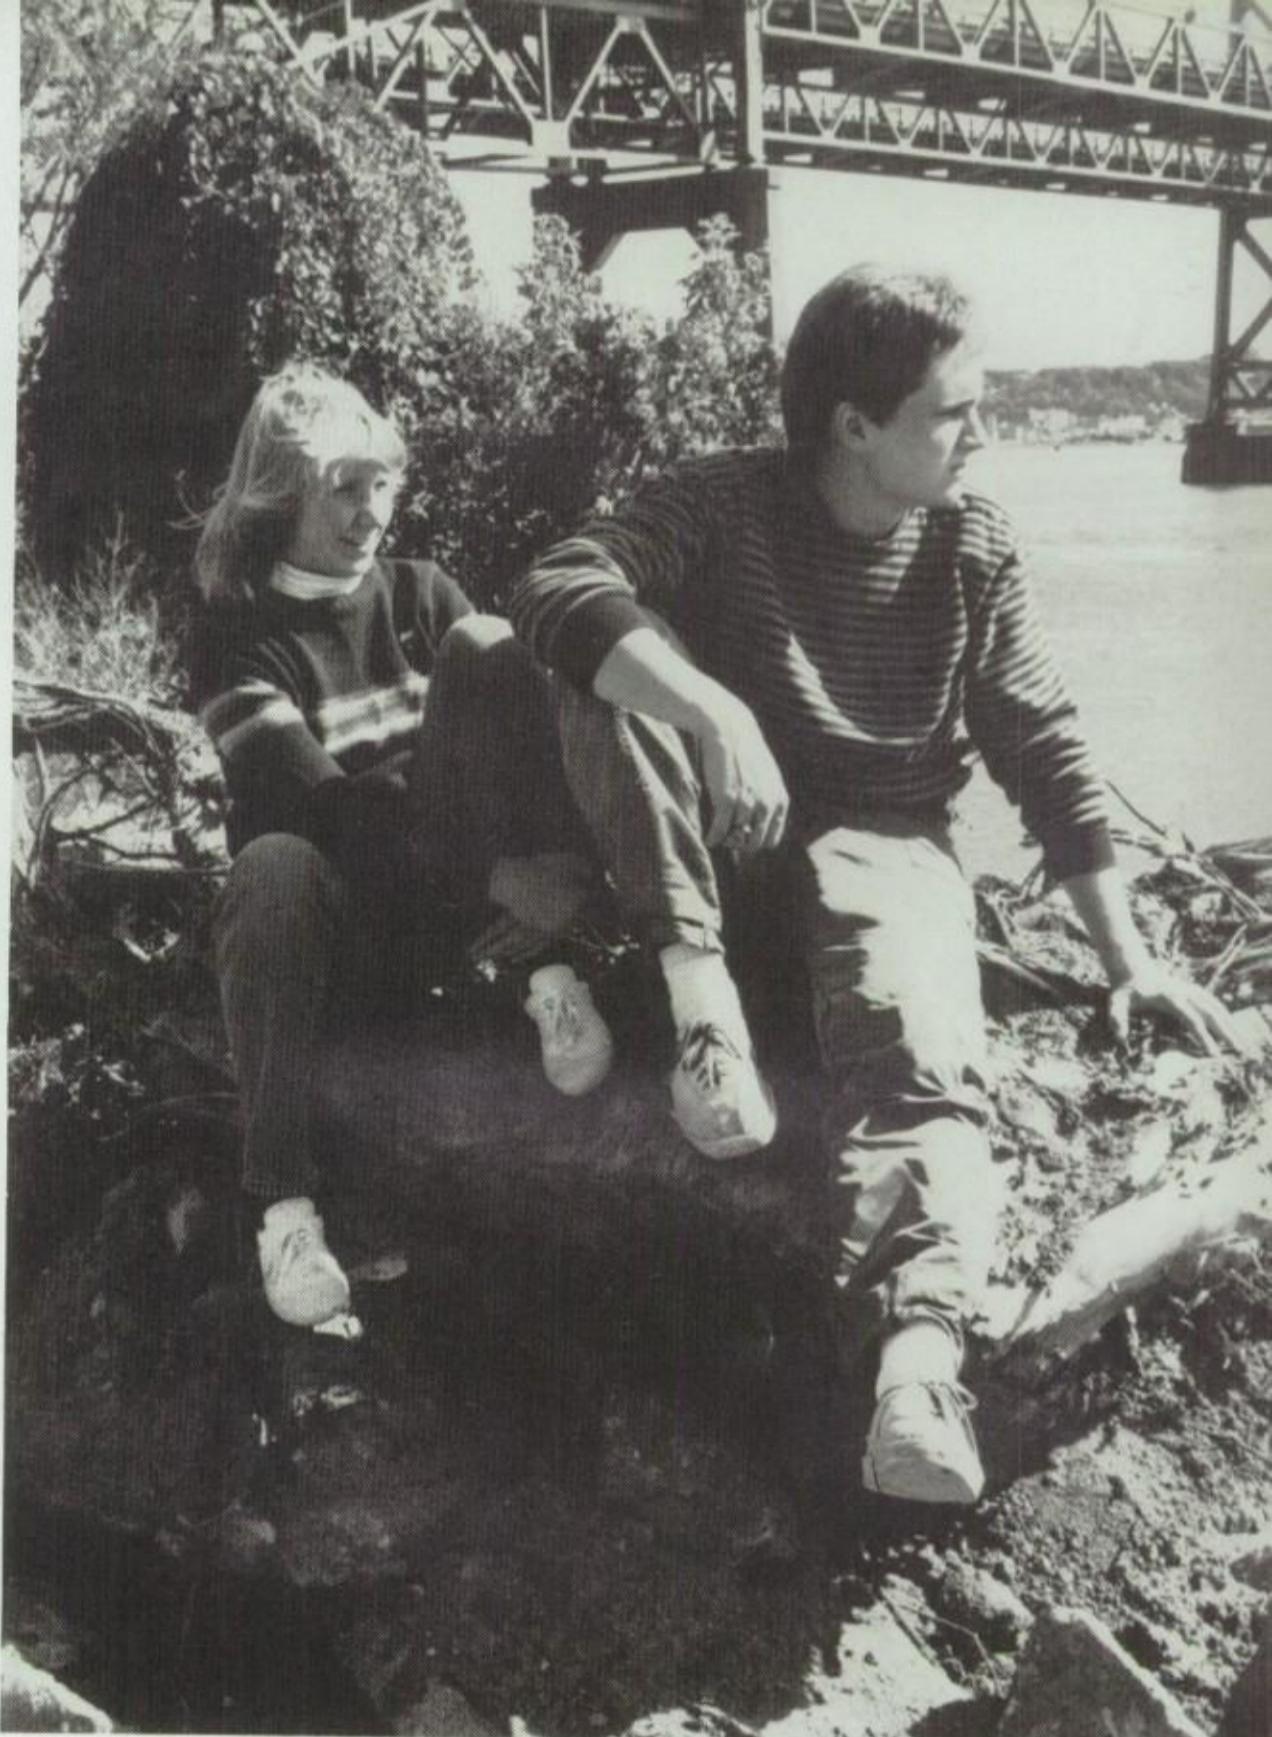

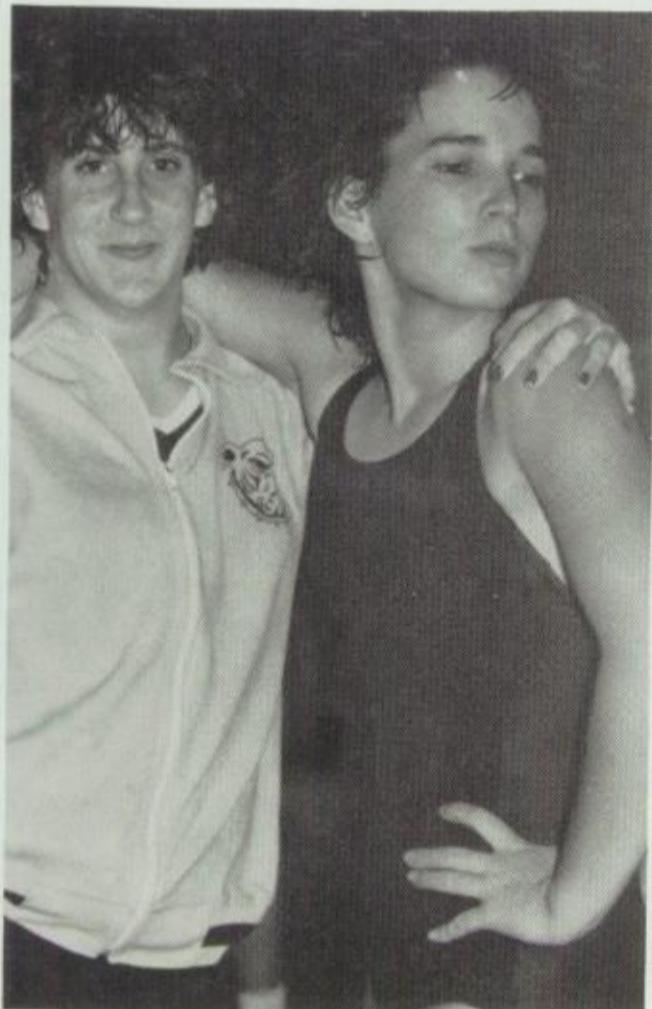

Bettendorf
High School

3333 18th St.
Bettendorf Iowa 52722
Volume 33

Swimmers Rhonda Givens and Molly Seitz, both juniors, show off their "style" after yet another Bulldog swimming victory.

Shannon and Tim Sipes overlook the river that joins the Quad Cities on a nice fall day.

Goldusters Becky Howland, Tammy Miller, and Caroline Laabs get together after dancing in the only fall pep aud.

What a Feeling!

For the 1,645 students at Berrendorf High School, school is more than just a place to learn. It is a special place for meeting friends, becoming involved and sharing feelings with those around us in special ways. Feelings are what join us together.

Feelings of disappointment . . . losing to arch rival Central in the playoffs . . . missing the "A" you've been working for by only five points . . . seeing the boy or girl you've had a crush on for three months walking through the halls with someone else.

Feelings of relief . . . asking that special person to a formal dance and having them say "yes" . . . being accepted to the college you've been dreaming of attending . . . knowing a month has passed and your parents still haven't mentioned anything about that party you had.

Feelings of fear . . . getting in your first car wreck and wondering how terrible your punishment is going to be . . . trying to find Doc Meador's American History class day one of your freshman year.

Who is it behind those Foster Grants? Sophomore Julie Mahoney appears to be confident, dad in her football uniform at this year's football pep aud.

With hopes in their eyes, juniors Lisa Bell and Kris Woolverton and their teacher, Deb Kereksen, wait for the list with the names of those who made All-State to be posted.

Joined by a Feeling

Feelings of pressure . . . your term paper is due tomorrow and you only have 10 of your note cards completed . . . your section of the yearbook is due tomorrow and you're still working the night before at midnight . . . having to memorize 250 lines for the school play by tomorrow.

Feelings of embarrassment . . . you're new in school and you ask someone where the cafeteria is and somehow you end up in automotives . . . you're sitting with your "new love" and your wonderful friends just happen to come along with elementary pictures of you when you had mom's famous crooked haircut and your Whinnie the Pooh polyester shirt on.

Feelings of anger . . . not getting the grade you thought you deserved . . . fighting with your friends over something meaningless.

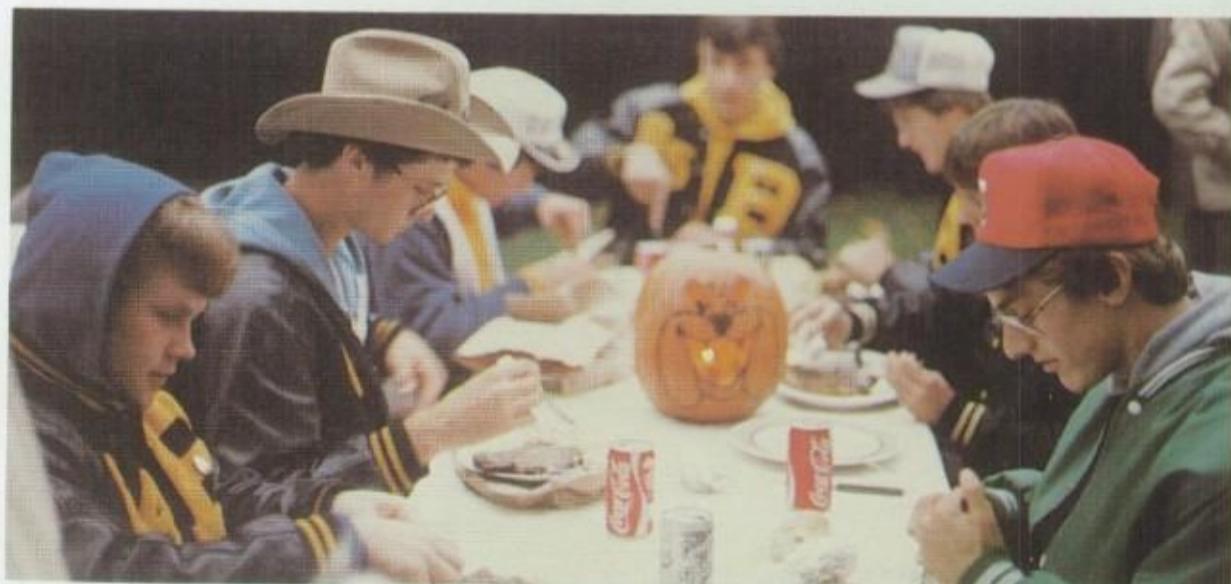

The feeling of pride . . . pride shows in all of us at Bettendorf . . . being part of an athletic program that is second to none . . . a school that is one of the best in the state . . . a faculty that cares about its students . . . a student body that shows pride with school spirit . . . all of these things combined for the school we are so proud to be a part of.

1984 was chosen as the Year of the River in the Quad Cities, and the theme "Joined by a River" plays a part in a lot we see and do from day to day. Just as easily as it can be said that the Quad Cities are joined by a river, it can be said that the students at Bettendorf are joined by a feeling.

The KSIT balloon flies high in the sky above Bettendorf High School on a bright day.

The annual football steak fry at the Mc Nally homestead gave the players a chance to "feast" together before the end of the season.

Dan Langston sure had his hands full at this year's Homecoming dance. He was "escorted" by seniors Kelly Gurke, Valerie Rininsland, Kim Gerdts, Sue Andrews and Jeanne Mart.

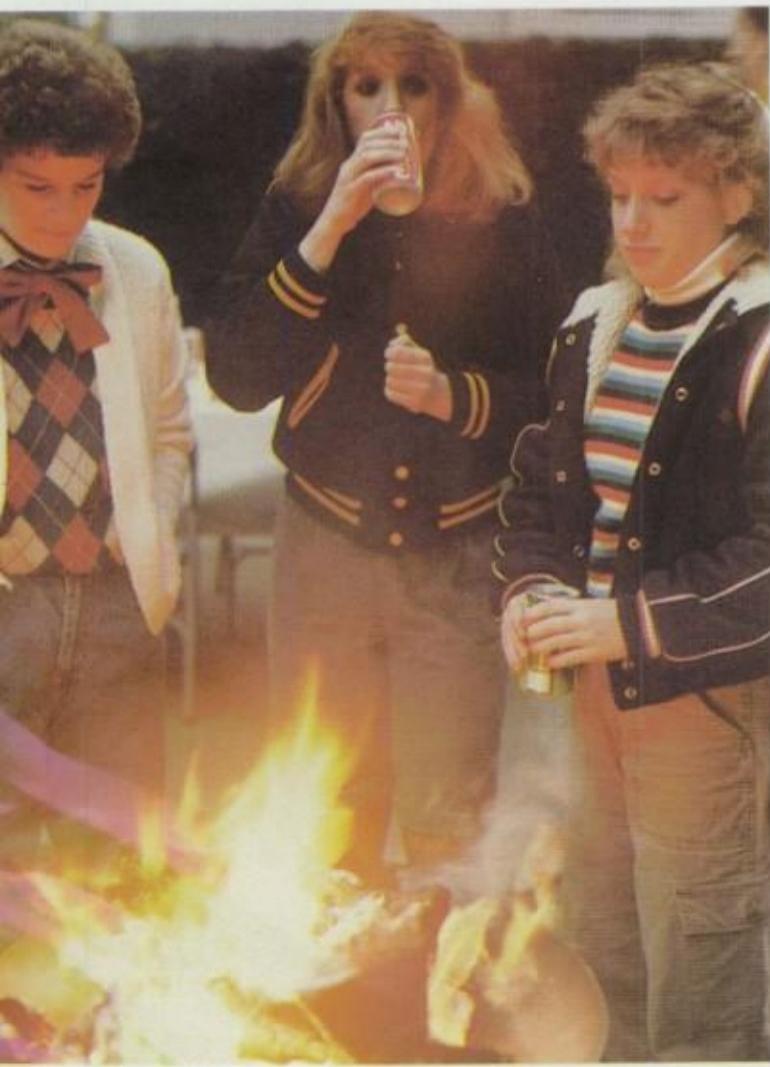

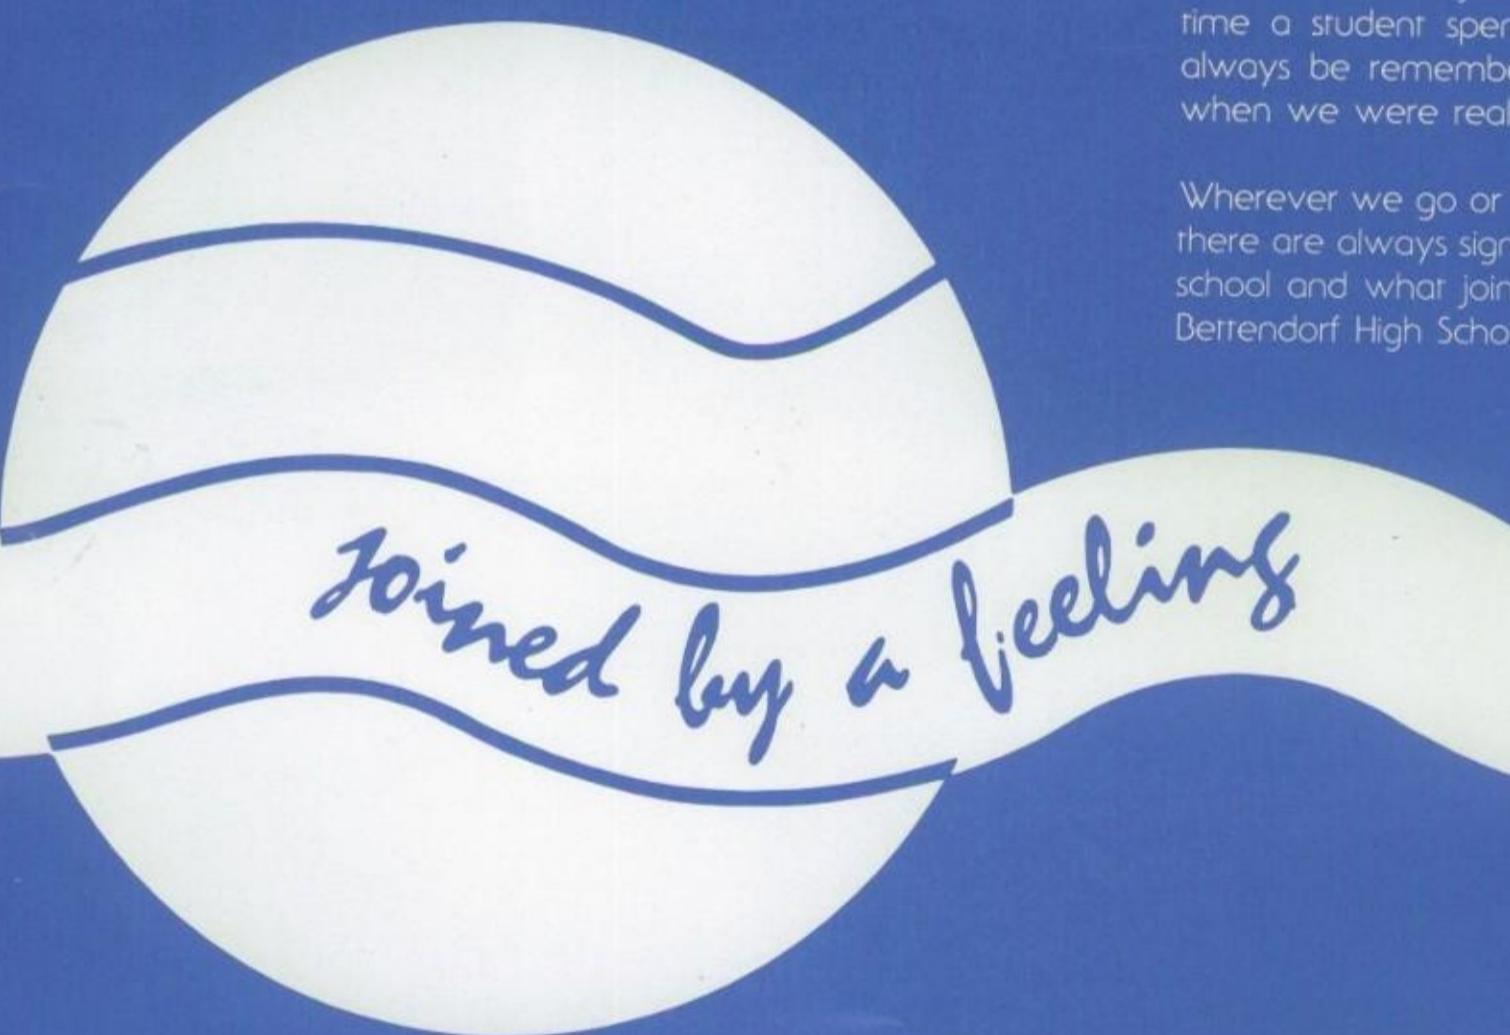

The waterslide gave students a great place to get away from it all this summer. Seniors Teresa Brooks, Laura Glynn and Brian Immel take advantage of the situation.

Varsity cheerleaders Dana Berry, Sandy Wall and Marcie Seymour get warm by the fire at the football steak fry. The outing was a success despite the cool weather.

Members of the Purdue Marching Band take a break from performing at this year's Homecoming game. The band stopped in Bettendorf enroute to Iowa City to perform at the Iowa-Purdue game.

The feelings of the students at BHS change after the 3:15 bell rings. Some feel apprehension as they march off to their jobs, some feel excitement as they go to various practices and club meetings, and some feel the great freedom of time away from school.

A student's life is full of special feelings that come from spending moments with friends and just having fun. The time a student spends at leisure will always be remembered as the time when we were really together.

Wherever we go or whatever we do there are always signs to remind us of school and what joins the students at Bettendorf High School ... a feeling.

STUDENT LIFE

SHOWING OUR PRIDE

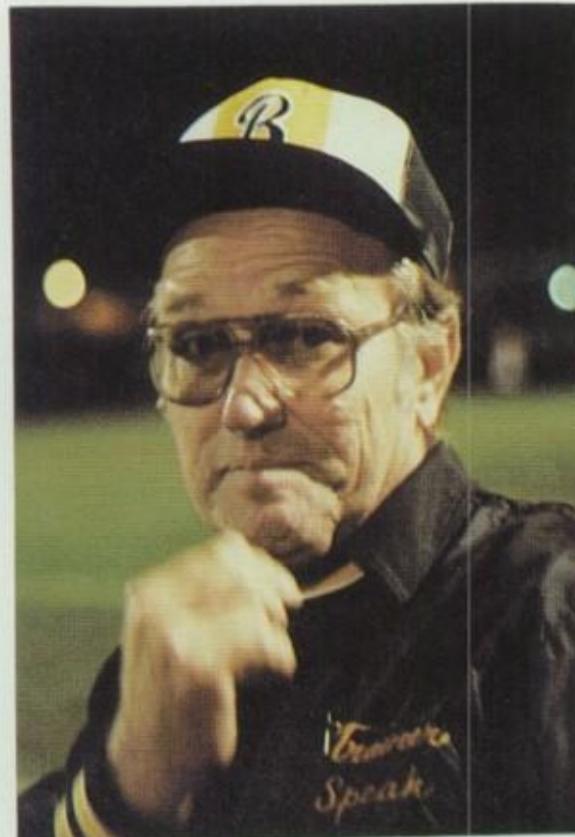

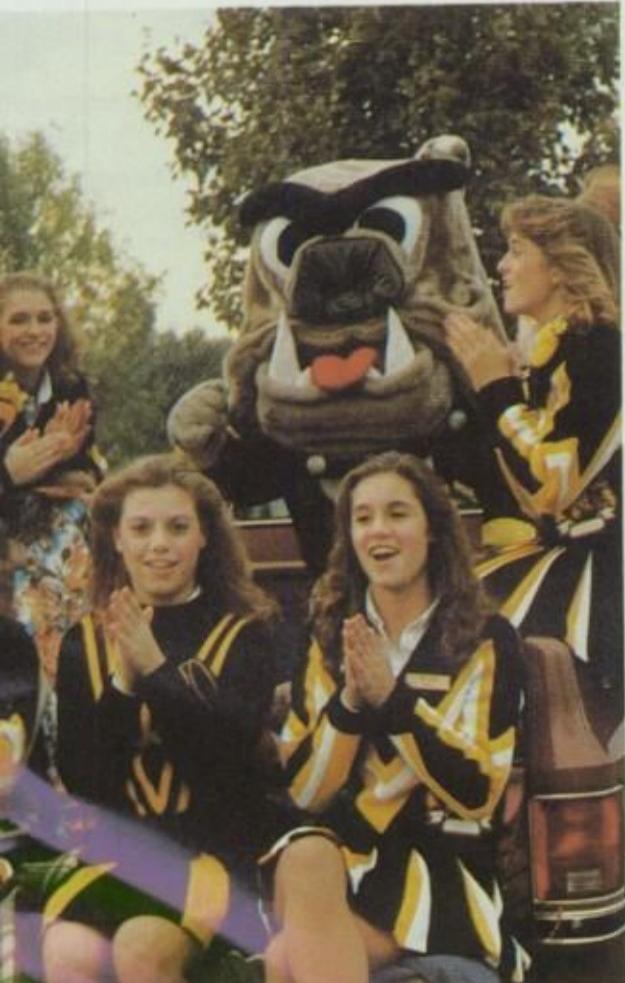

Fired up and ready for the Central football game are seniors Amy Stevenson, Mindi Ringel, Nancie Derers, Dana Camp, Bridgit Cassidy, Tammy Wooren, Maggie Place, and Karen Maxwell.

Sophomores Julie Waterman and Sharon Sisson display the true status of the Bulldogs.

IDE . . .

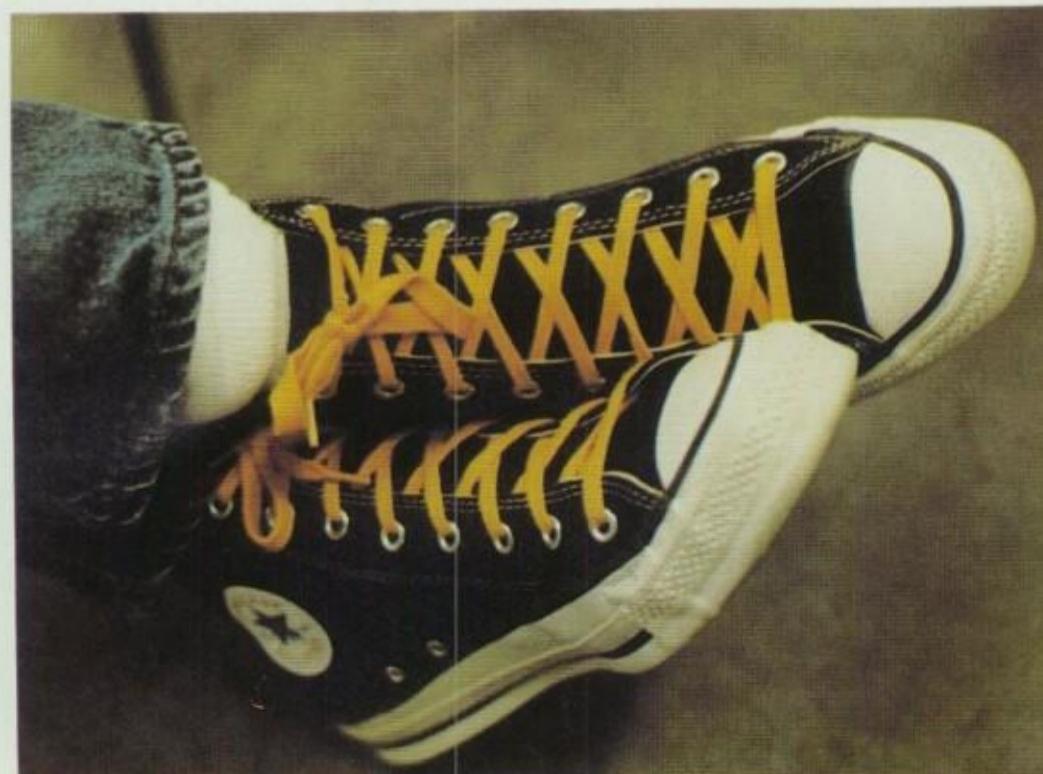

Football trainer, Mr. Reggie Speak flashes a silly smirk.

Number 74, Par McNally, bursts through to lead the Berendord Bulldogs to another victory.

Miss Karen Burgus tips her hat in pride.

Varsity Cheerleaders Lori Vance, Diane Cox, Michelle Heydn, Julie Vance, Tammy Schone, Marcie Seymour, Meg Higgins and Jane Irwin, keep up the spirit during the Homecoming parade assisted by Bobby Bulldog.

In his black and gold sneakers, Chip Cavendish demonstrates that "laid back spirit."

FROM HEAD TO TOE

Seniors "rowdies" surprise the crowd with their special entry. The float was entered by members of the senior class.

AN EXCITING AFFAIR

Wet and cold was how this year's Homecoming Parade started, but that certainly didn't put a damper on the turnout. Hundreds of Bettendorfers came to see their friends and children participate in the yearly event. This particular parade was just a little different than ones in years gone by.

Vandals put their "mark" on the class floats, the Hooligans entered a surprise float stating "Coors to you Dawgs" and the Homecoming court each carried a bulldog pup to fire up the players and fans.

The Homecoming court was announced by Mr. Chuck Nolting at the annual Pep Rally. Touvelle Stadium quieted as Mr. Nolting got up to introduce familiar faces, but was interrupted by the crackling and smoking of fire crackers and smoke bombs hurled from the bleachers. Students filled the stands waiting, watching and wondering as the court processed across the track.

Bob Kelsey and Kelly Ruppert were crowned King and Queen with great approval from the crowd, the cheerleaders and the band. The cold night was wrapped up with the crowd witnessing Kelly And Bob lighting the victory torch.

Along with the crowning of the King and Queen the Pep Rally had many other attractions. The football captains gave their well rehearsed speeches and the cheerleaders fired up the fans with their loud and exciting cheers.

The parade had entries ranging from fire trucks to Smurfs and from the class of '63 Dunbuggy to the Pepsi Challenge Car.

This years parade was a success, bringing about feelings of pride, happiness and above all excitement for the rest of the Homecoming festivities.

Most Loyal Fan and Parade Marshall, Wendell Hill, addresses the crowd at the Pep Rally.

SO CAUGHT UP IN YOU . . .

The cost was a mere $7.00, but the memories that will remain from this years Homecoming Dance bear no price tag.

The theme for the dance was 38 Special's "So Caught Up in You." The cafeteria was cleverly designed with nets, ropes, streamers and balloons to build up the theme.

The music was cranked out by Rumor, which included Senior Mike Ryner on lead guitar and Junior Stefanie Douglas on vocals. BHS graduates Steve Ripley (co-lead guiter) and Bob Gish (drums) teamed with Dave Donovan to complete the group. They played a good blend of tunes ranging from "Every Breath You Take"

by the Police to Bryan Adams' "Cuts Like A Knife."

The dance also included the crowning ceremony, in which King Bob Kelsey and Queen Kelly Ruppert proudly accepted their titles.

A lot of the excitement came after the dance, when the area hotel rooms began to fill, and the parties began. This too is part of the memory.

When you think of the Homecoming Dance in the many years to come let the answers to the following questions serve as a reminder to the time you had.

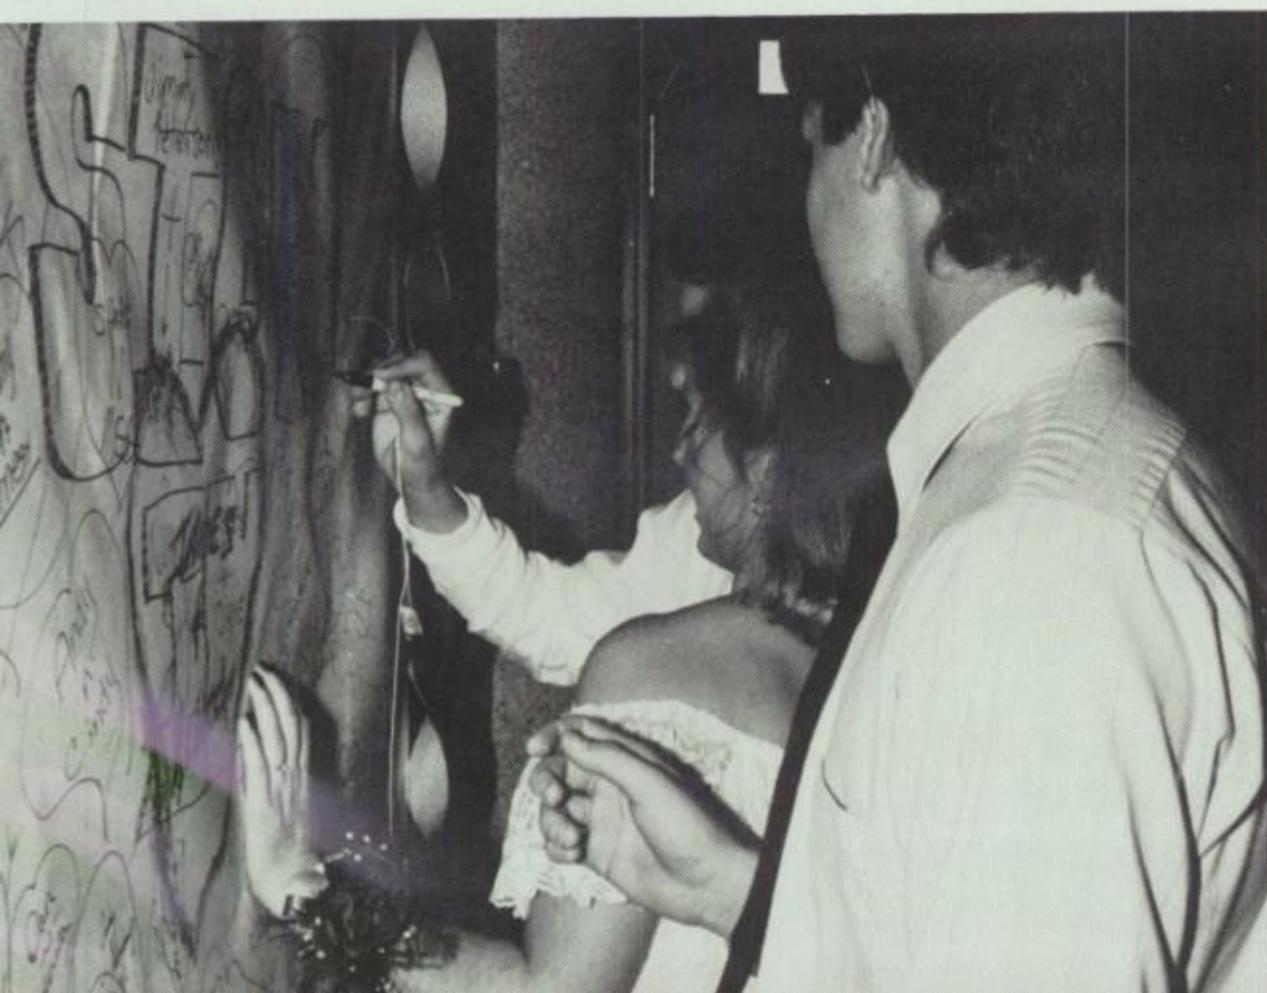

1. I went with _____ to the dance?
2. My flower was _____ color?
3. I put on my best fake smile for _____ thousand pictures?
4. Our dinner bill at _____ was _____,000,000.00?
5. Even though I went to the dance with _____, I went home with _____?
6. I walked through the front door at _____ a.m.?
8. I had a _____ time?
 - a. good
 - b. bad
 - c. fair
 - d. helluva

-Steve Hunter

This years Royalty: Dave Berglund, Scott Andriano, Bob Kelsey, Kevin Jandt, Tim Diamond, Stefani Picchiotti, Julie Berglund, Kris Thorne, Amy Porter and Kelly Ruppert.

Couples found it fun to sign in on arrival at the dance. This has become a tradition.

A STATE OF CONFUSION!!!

What is floatbuilding you ask? Exactly what the title above says - A State Of Confusion. It's a maze of faces giggling, paint spilling, and napkins flying. For most it is a good excuse to put off homework. Others find it just plain fun. When asked what she liked about it, junior Lori Vance replied, "The 'high' I get from the paint fumes!"

"Watching everyone panic during the final minutes of the last day is fun to watch," sophomore Sandee Guesford commented.

Numerous students and teachers herded into the bus barn hammer-in-hand to work. They all spent approximately 31 hours taking the wire, wood, and cardboard to construct the colorful characters and catchy captions. Tom Keating liked floatbuilding because, "it's a chance to get together with your friends and do something constructive instead of destructive."

Debbie St. Clair, Wendy Brown, Lori Vance, and Michelle Heydn diligently work

It looked like this year some vandals were in the destructive mood as all four floats were destroyed. The sad part was what took 31 hours of teamwork to make, took less than an hour for a few to ruin.

Just 4 hours before the floats were to make their debut in the annual Homecoming Parade, bus barn personell noticed that they had been torn apart. Student Council members were excused from their 7th and 8th period classes to try and reconstruct the floats. Much of the damage was beyond repair. The floats did appear in the parade but it just wasn't the same. An $85 reward was offered to find the vandals.

-Nancie Deters

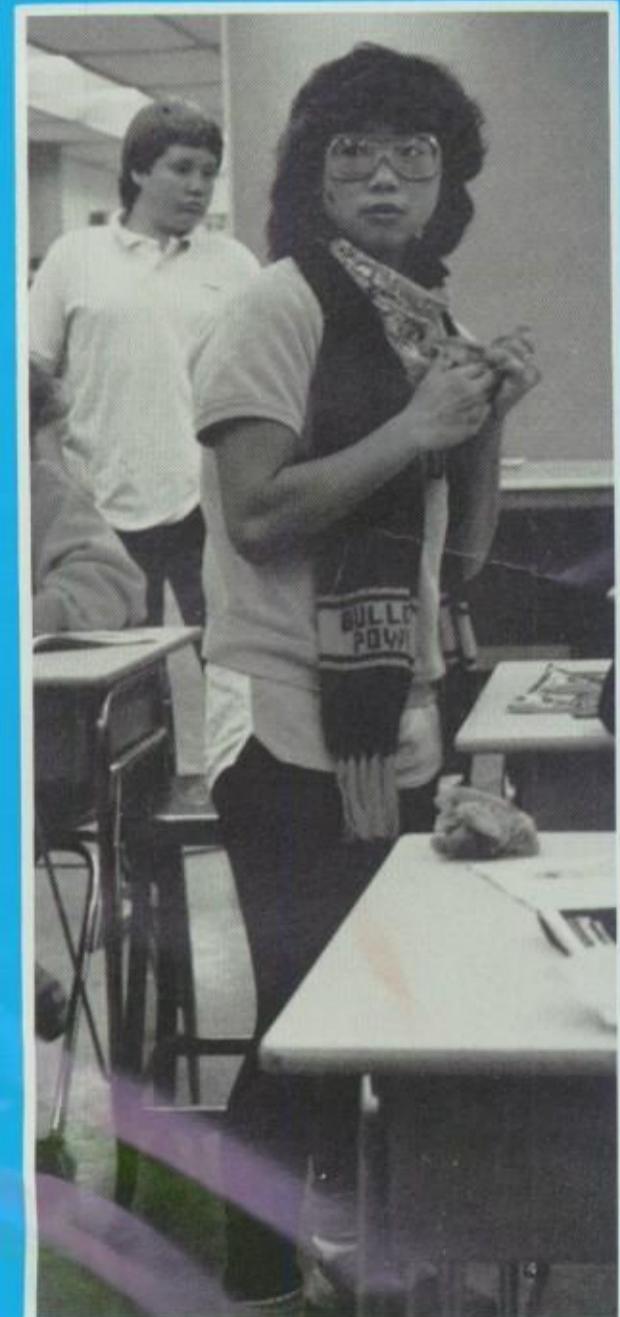

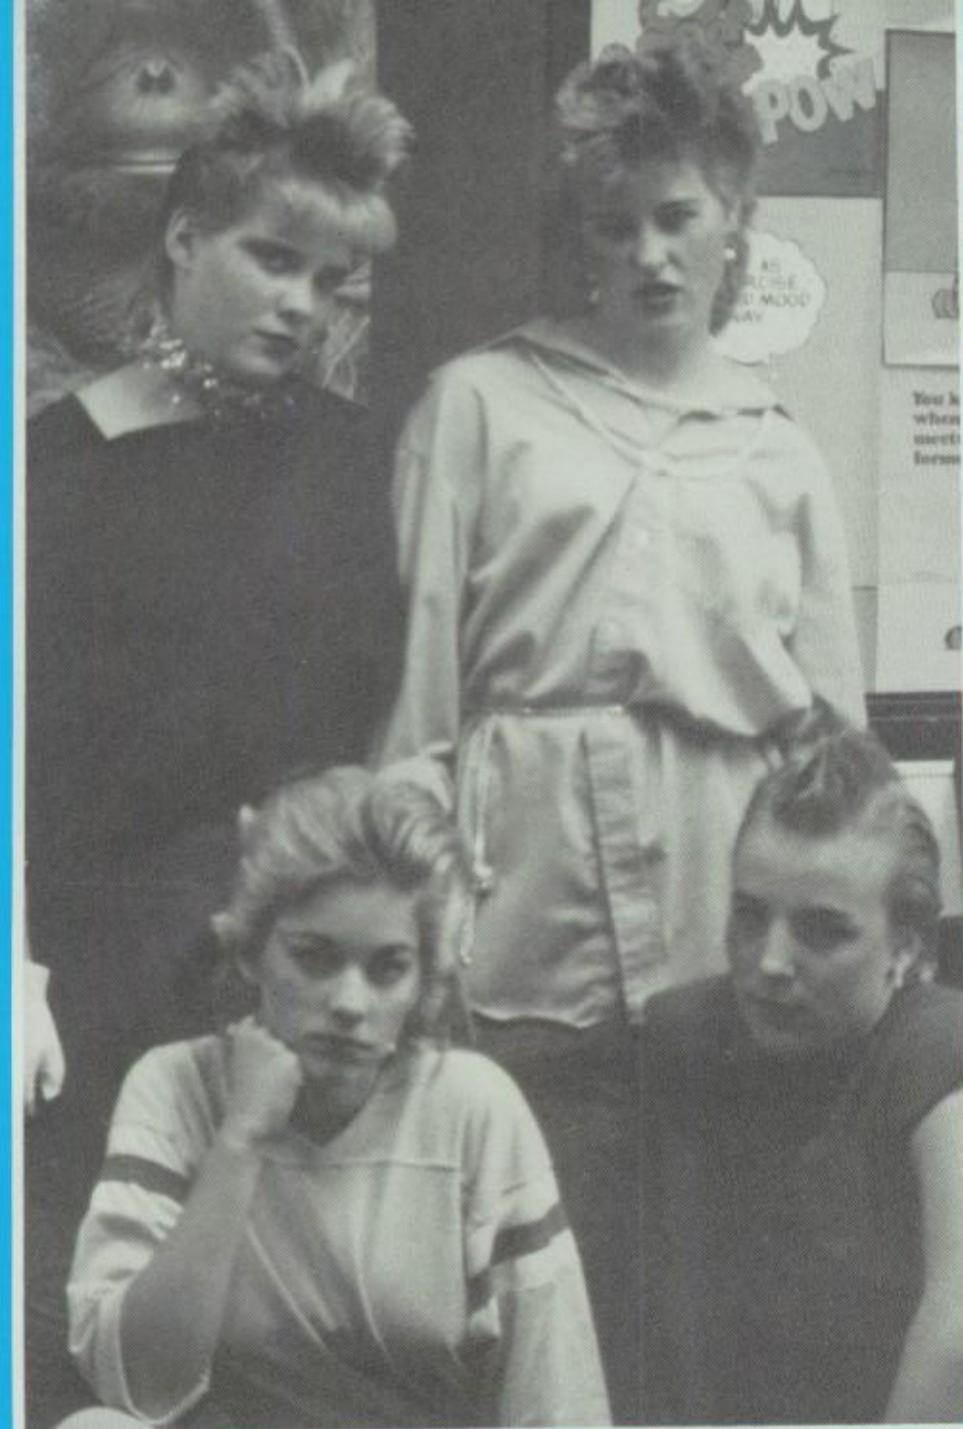

Senior Dana Camp carefully "stuffs" chicken wire to create a goal post.

Due to the destruction of the floats the evening of the parade students had to prop up their floats.

Floatbuilding takes teamwork, demonstrated by this group of builders.

SPIRIT!!!

MONDAY

Oh my god, Monday morning you can't find a thing to wear. Your Calvin Klein's are dirty and your Izod has Saturday night's residue all over it. Great, today is "Grub Day", you don't even have to take a shower. You don't even have to brush your teeth, but it is recommended. You throw on some old clothes and you're off.

TUESDAY

Everybody's Gone Surfin', Surfin' U.S.A. Terrific, there's frost on your windshield and you're supposed to dress like a "Californian." You go to school wearing thongs, shorts, flowered shirts, and sunglasses on your head and find our golf is outside today for gym.

WEDNESDAY

The day was "Punk," the closer was "Prep." What do you do? Throw on your summer mini-skirt (guys also), put as much makeup on as possible, don't even bother to comb your hair. Take one last look in the mirror and run with horror in your eyes by the mere sight of yourself.

THURSDAY

The wearing of the Black-n-Gold is everywhere and on everything from your hair down to the black n gold shoelaces. Your eighth period class you fall asleep dreaming about the Black-n-Gold.

FRIDAY

No school? Are you dreaming or what? No, it really was true, no school on Friday due to teachers' inservice. This caused a little corruption because there was no Pep Aud.

- Barb Lay

Going all out are radicals Kim Wilson, Sharon Sassen, Cindy Groves, and Laura Baumbach.

Dawn Rhiel displays the Bulldog Power.

Freshman Chris Brachtel, Shelly Lininger, and Marc Dittman get into the high school spirit on Punk Day.

Ready to hit the beach are seniors Steve Tappa, Barb Lay, Mitch Groth and Bridgit Cassidy.

PARTYING . . .

Your parents are leaving in two days!! It's time to make plans!! No more curfews, times to be off the phone, cleaning your room etc. just pure relaxation, or is it . . .? There is so much to accomplish while they're gone.

You have to throw a party, it just wouldn't be right if you didn't. All your friends are counting on you!! But the main thing is to stay out late, don't do homework, eat a lot of junk and play the stereo as loud as possible at all times! (Neighbors?! What neighbors? It's just you and your friends this weekend!)

Well the party is rolling and everyone is happy. The telephone rings- it must be your buddy. Wrong! It's 'mummy' dear! Nor to check up on you or anything, she really does 'trust' you! (actually she's giving you fair warning to get the kids out and the house clean by tomorrow morning).

"Sure Mom, everything is fine." CRASH!! Somebody just knocked over your mother's favorite flower pot on the floor- it's shattered.

"It's that dreadful cat you dragged in the house Mom, (oops! the one that hasn't been fed for three days) it just knocked over your flower pot!"

"List of items to do?! Oh, yeah here it is (under your school books, no wonder you didn't see it!) Sure, I'll do, I mean DID them!"

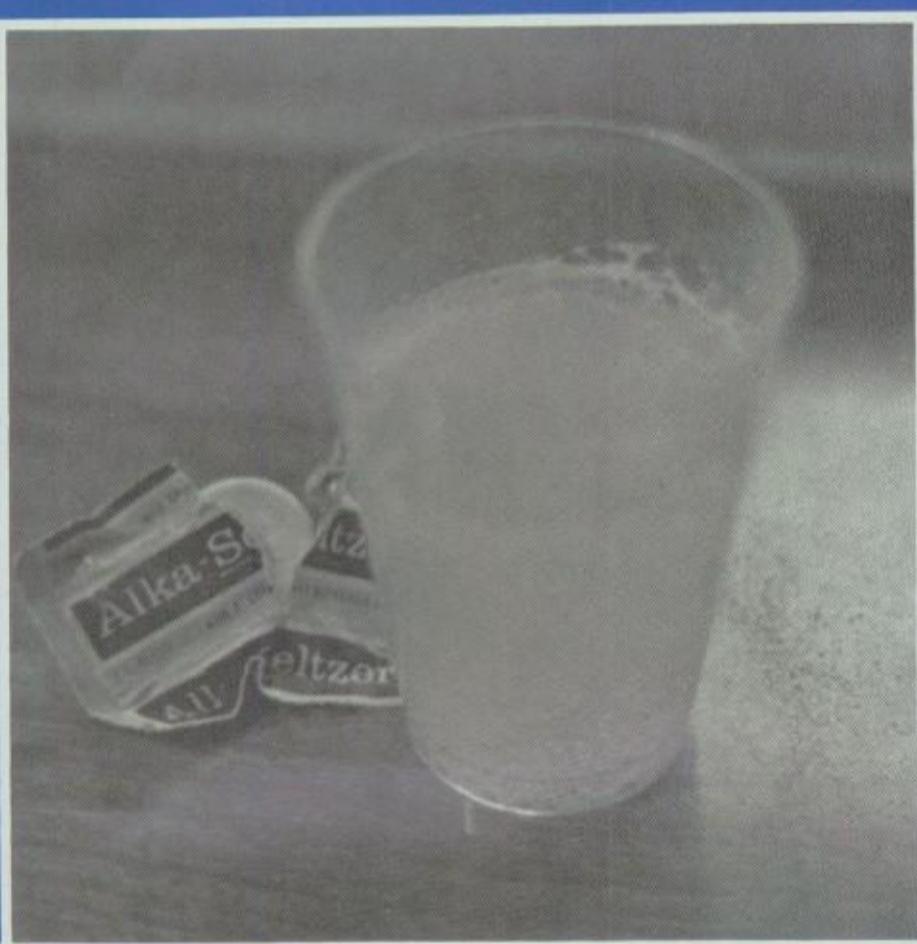

"Uh huh, see ya tomorrow!" Click. Who was on the phone? No one important. Turn up the stereo!! Keep the party going here!!

- Lynn Griffin

Senior girls - all smiles.

Karen Fandel, Paul Thorsen, Brad Fandel, Tina Brown and Todd Shipley show a favorite place to get together - the car!

The scene the morning after - not as beautiful as the night before.

What a relief it is!

... AFTER THE PARTY'S OVER

What a savage time last night. I think I'll scrape the scum off my teeth and then grab a pepsi, my mouth is a bit pasty this morning.

As I make a dive for the bathroom, Ugh!! Something familiar comes over me, The Sunday Morning Revenge! Is that person in the mirror really me? I lost a little color over night.

Out of the corner of my eye I catch the time, it's only 1:32 P.M. - I think I'll just roll back over. Who is that kicking me in the head- oh they're just knocking on the door.

Oh, Hi mom, what do you . . . MOM!!! What are you doing home? You weren't supposed to be home until tonight. Oh, yeah, sure I remember your phone call.

Mess, what mess? Oh, the one in the basement- well it's kind of a long boring story, nothing you would be interested in. Oh you would? Well, ya see some how, I havent the slightest how, everybody found out you and dad were leaving and low and behold everybody came knocking- like there was supposed to be a party or something. Well, I heard a couple people yell threats while I was explaining to them how you trusted me not to let anyone in, so I decided a little mess was better than a dead kid on your hands. Pretty good thinking on my part, huh?

Pick up after breakfast? Sure, no problem (the word breakfast becomes an obscenity). Uh, Mom I think I'll pass on breakfast. Sick? I look pale? No, I'm not sick, I just, well uh . . . don't have much of an appetite this morning- thanks anyway.

-Lynn Griffin

FOOD GLORIOUS FOOD . . .

The following equation is for food: Food + Overeating = Obesity Dier

Food Glorious Food, a topic to dream on. What was it like when cavemen used to eat bugs and grass? It's hard to imagine when we've been surrounded by fat, greasy, pizza's, Hostess Twinkies and Ding Dongs ever since we were little tykes.

Food is something that never goes away (unless we eat it!) We just get more and more of it, unfortunately.

When we were younger we used to get rewarded with food for doing something well. Now that we are older and do so many good things we like to reward ourselves often with such low-cal foods as a Whitey's Butterfinger Malt.

Food is everywhere we are, or else we are everywhere the food is. It's merely impossible to get rid of the stuff.

Ahhhhh, those wonderful holidays, the first thing to come to our minds is how big the plates going to be. Everything we do revolves around that stuff.

WHAT really is food besides CALORIES? Just something that leads us to that popular saying: "I'll start my diet tomorrow."

- Barb Lay

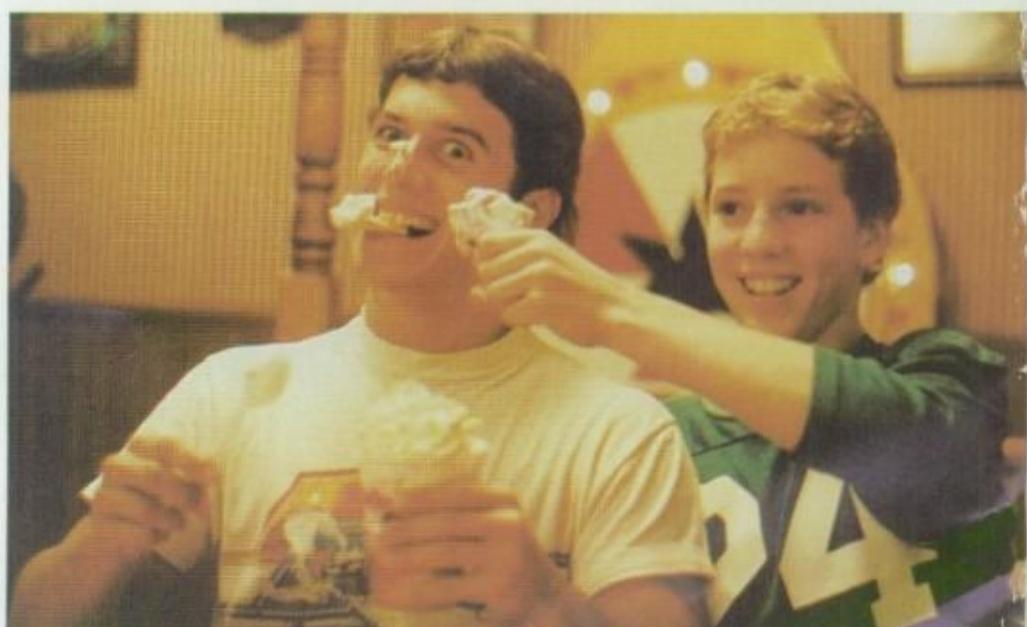

Grabbing for all they can get, Maggie Place and Lori Martzahn show their passion for candy.

A favorite aisle for all those who truly enjoy sweets. Think of all the calories.

Sisters Stephanie and Cindy Witr snatching up a few items for their mother, just the bare essentials!

Up at Happy Joes are sophomores Tom Williams and Mike Leinhauser - They scream for ice cream!

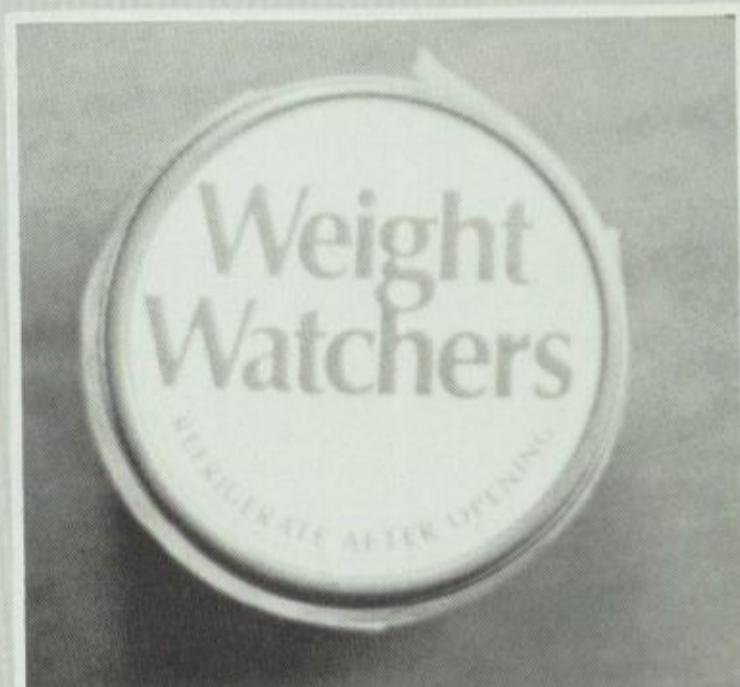

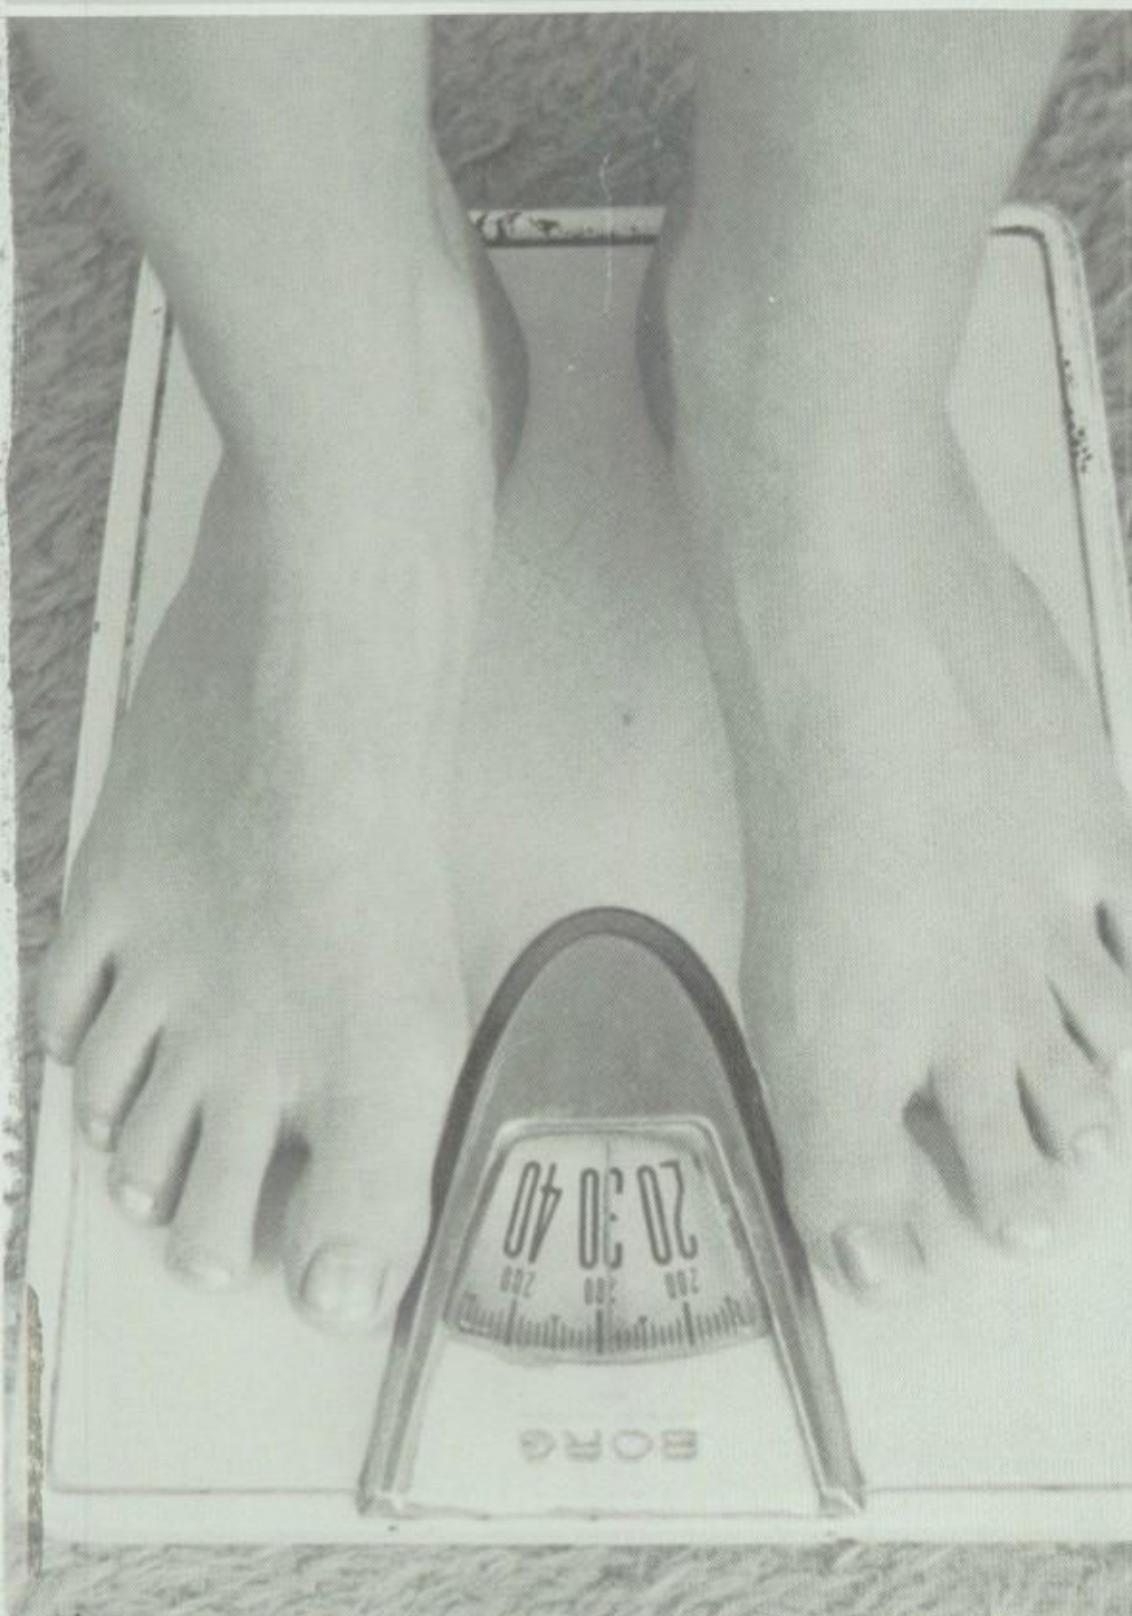

Stepping on the scale can be a dieter's nightmare.

A Dieter's dinner - Diet Pepsi and celery - YUMMY!! This is as tasty as it gets.

Weight Watchers is one of the more recognized logos of the hundreds of diet programs out today.

Special K - A dieter's way to start the day!!

Those Blubber Blues

Why is it that food, food, food, almost inevitably leads to diet, diet, diet?! You can't enjoy the first without the second running right along behind it. The 1980's will probably be the best remembered as the decade of the dieters. Millions of individuals have gotten into the craze of dieting - more accurately called the "Blubber Blues."

Why is it that unloading extra baggage is so hard? Human beings spend billions of dollars on dieting books, soluble powdered mixtures, programs, weight loss capsules, jump ropes, wheat germ, and sweat suits alone can run up quite a bill. People spend so many bucks on those brightly colored pieces of fabric just so they can sweat like greased pigs in them. It would be so much cheaper and easier to cut off a limb everytime you increased your poundage.

Food, why is it so hard to live without? I'm sure you've heard the saying - You can kick me in the shins, spit in my face, tie my neck to the bumper of a Grey Hound bus but touch my food and consider yourself dead! It is extremely hard to push off those pounds. You try to watch what you eat but, unfortunately, your eyes aren't quick enough. Seriously, don't worry about a few extra rolls. Everyone seems to lose in the 'Battle of the Bulge.'"

- Nancie Deters

All that dough — where's it go?

All week you wait for it. Look forward to it. Pray for it. Plan it. And then finally it's here! PAYDAY!!! That glorious day that comes once a week, (twice a week for some), and leaves you rolling in money. (for the next 24 hours, anyway.)

Now you don't have to worry about the quarter Doug owes you, and the Dollar Lisa owes you, or whether or not you can sell your younger brothers cherished collection of bubble gum wrappers without trouble from mom and dad. Now you can just get down to the joy of spending all your hard earned cash.

Of all the ways there are to earn money, there's at least ten times as many ways to spend it. By popular opinion, party supplies heads the list of priorities students have for spending their paychecks. Next comes food, as in lunch, candy bars, late night pizzas, etc. Girls as well as guys agree they spend lots of money on dates, and guys say that their cars cost them at least half their check for gas, repairs, and insurance. While girls say their check is NEVER enough for all the clothes and accessories they want.

Now some students are lucky and can charm Mom and Dad into giving them lunch money, buying clothes, paying insurance etc. Every little bit helps.

Some students find ways to save money by bringing lunch, sharing lunch, skipping lunch, etc. Also, trading clothes with a friend or sharing rides to and from school. But all that's no fun. If you've got money, spend it! If you don't, spend anyone else's that you can. (Parents are suckers for duty talks.) "I'm your responsibility until I graduate so you should give me lunch money so I won't starve to death or pass out in school and embarrass you." It works almost 50% of the time. The other 50% are either grounded, kicked out or in the hospital.

Bribery and charm don't always work, but for money it's worth a try.

-Karen Fandel

Junior Chad Meyer realizes that athletic equipment can be expensive.

High School students find spending money on albums an absolute necessity.

Berrendorf students attend concerts at the Unidome, Palmer and The Five Seasons. It's a popular but expensive pastime.

A group of freshmen girls show their enthusiasm for the informal affair.

Even though the dance floor is always crowded, you can usually manage to squeeze in somewhere, as shown by Jenny Maxfield and Sylvia Friedrichsen.

Dennis Gell and Sarah Krebs join other couples for a slow dance.

Put on your Boogie shoes!

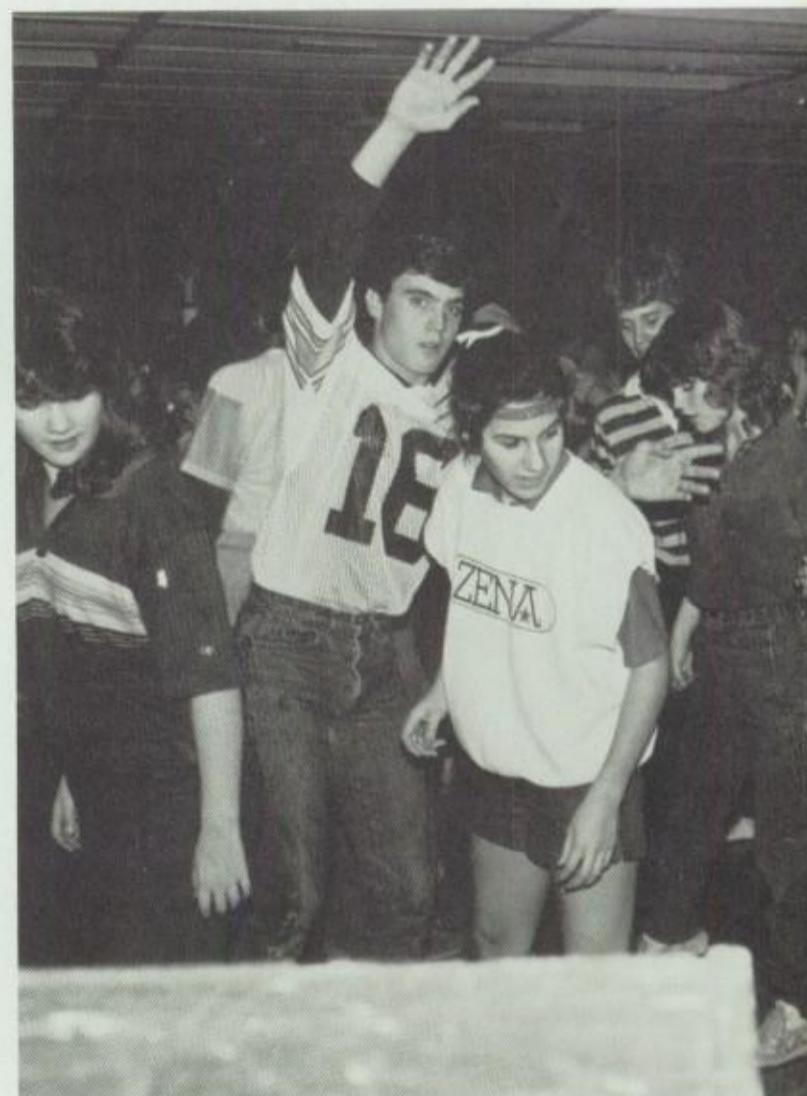

The school year just doesn't seem right if you haven't attended an informal dance. It's one of those few school functions where you can just let loose and get crazy! Many people enjoy dressing up wild. It seems as if there is a personality change in nearly everyone who attends.

But aside from the rowdy body bopping and screaming the lyrics from your favorite song, there are always the intimate slow dances which always seem to spark up new romances. Asking that guy or girl you've had your eye on to dance is always a great way to get things going. No matter how hot and sweaty everybody is, nobody seems to mind another hot body to hold during the mellow songs.

The action starts once again when the music beat switches to a faster pace and another riot has begun. The slick dance floor fills up once again and everybody enjoys the few remaining songs before the end of the dance.

After the music stops there are some who wind down and return home to think of another crazy idea for the next dance, but there are always those party animals who just don't quit, those who get lost in the night to continue their fun!!

-Lynn Griffin

Jim Behrend and Sue Simms find room to get down.

Lisa Arp and Dan Bruck enjoy dancing to a slower beat.

Barry Studemann, Brian Immel, Renee Koufer, Paul Petersen, and Kitty Flynn take time off the dance floor to relax.

Nickelby Premieres

The drama department started off the year with the fall play, "Nicholas Nickelby." The play featured a cast of almost forty students.

Originally, the show started on Broadway where it was the hit of the season four years ago, and lasted a total of 8 hours with an hour break for dinner. The high school production only lasted about an hour and a half. Director Howard Sible said, "As far as I know, we're the first high school in the nation to do this show. The costume company didn't even have a listing for it." "Nicholas Nickelby" was a unique show about a young man named Nicholas, (freshman Paul Thorson) who came to London with his mother, (sophomore Sue Carlson) and lovely sister Kate, (freshman Tiffany DiBernardo) seeking happiness and good fortune.

However, throughout the play, Nicholas encounters many villains who seem determined to cause trouble for him. Starting with his uncle, Ralph Nickelby, (senior Rob Westerlund), who, with the help of his evil friends, such as schoolmaster Wackford Squeers, (senior Craig Furne) Squeers screeching wife, (senior Kelly Gurke) and obnoxious daughter Fanny, (junior Lisa Bell) all plot together to attempt to bring Nicholas to his knees.

However, Nicholas is too clever for their evil tricks. The play has a surprise ending and a triple wedding. All in all, "Nicholas Nickelby" was a great success.

-By Karen Fandel

"The real John Holliday?!" Director Howard Sible exclaims over his gift from the cast and crew of Nicholas Nickelby.

Paul Thorson prostrates as Craig Furne prepares to hit Brian Wadlow.

Craig Furne and Kelly Gurke show their true acting spirit.

Paul Thorson and Stefani Picchiotti, model their wedding gifts from the cast.

Senior Mike Sible finds the light board easy to operate.

Paul Thorson, Tiffany DiBernardo, and Susan Carlson take their places on stage.

And Oh! That Wonderful Feeling . . .

There's nothing to compare with the feeling of accomplishment that comes in knowing you've put together a good play.

Nothing brings a cast together like hard work, patience, good friends and a good sense of humor, and while the process of putting a play together is grueling, it's all worthwhile when the lights go up and the show is on. You're all in this together, like one big, happy family. And although some may think it's all work and no play, a look behind the scenes would show a close-knit, happy group of actors, actresses, and crew members who like to have a good time, (once their legs stop shaking.) And believe me, they really shake. A violent fluttering of the heart and constriction of the throat usually go along with the shakes that every actor and actress feel as they frantically pace the floor backstage, wringing their hands and desperately trying to repeat lines they can't for the life of them remember. Suddenly, their cue. Drawing a deep breath they step briskly onto the stage, and the lines they couldn't remember moments before, magically return. Stepping offstage after the final bows, they all hug and congratulate each other before going into the lobby to receive parents and guests. And Oh! What a wonderful, overpowering feeling to be part of such a close group of very special friends.

FASHION

What are you wearing right now? Something Preppy? Classic? The more comfortable style? Or maybe even nu-wave? Whatever the fashion of dress you're wearing, this year B.H.S. seemed to have them all.

The classic look focused on a conservative style with basic colors. Short blazers, pleated pants, sweater vests, high collared blouses, neck ties, pearl necklaces, and pumps were just a few items that were worn. Plaid kilt skirts, monogrammed sweaters, turtlenecks, and oxford blouses were part of the preppy look. Along with these went argyle anything, bow ties, and penny loafers. Not to mention those little alligators were everywhere!! Let us not forget how nu-wave swept through our school and everywhere for that matter - Mini skirts, jean jackets, trench coats, huge colorful earrings, thin ties, and spiked heels highlighted it. Finally, that laid back or casual look. High tops swarmed the hallways in every imaginable color. Sweats, pin striped jeans, colored moccasins, rugby shirts were also popular. Bandanas were a must!!

As quick as fashion comes and goes, the current trends of fashion today will be "old fashioned" tomorrow.

A Touch of Class

Actually, this year's Variety Show was a one of a kind show with approximately 70 very talented students doing approximately 30 entertaining acts. The theme of the show was "A Touch of Class" and the show played on December 8, 9, and 10, at 8:00 p.m.

Opening the show in their tuxedos, (really classy) were Senior Kelly Gurke and Junior Brad Fandel introducing the Jazz Band and Limited Edition. Vocal Music Director Deb Kerelsen said, "Everyone did so well. I was really impressed."

Following acts included the Golddusters, song and dance solos and duets, musical solos, comedy spoofs, and much, much, more. Senior Darin Brown commented "The audience was really responsive, even better than last year."

Tickets were sold for $2.50 and by a few days before the show, tickets for the Friday and Saturday night performances were hard to come by. Both nights were sold out, and Thursday night only a handful of seats were available.

Emcee Brad Fandel said, "Me and Kelly were always arguing about everything, but it was all part of the fun. We can laugh about it now." Shannon Sipes from the Kugaran Rock Band said, "Everyone had a good time," which more or less sums up the opinions of the performers. From a viewers standpoint, Senior Mirch Groth said, "It looked really professional and well put together."

All in all, the Variety Show truly displayed "A Touch of Class."

-Karen Fandel

Emcees Senior Kelly Gurke and Junior Brad Fandel, entertain the audience side by side.

Freshman Jay Douglas sings "To Have You by My Side," a song he wrote himself.

Juniors Kris Wolverton and Chris Manara hiss and yowl their way through "Meow," a soprano duet.

Junior Julie Buckley sings "How Am I Supposed to Live Without You."

Senior Stefani Pichiorri takes a moment to ask for the time between acts.

The Jazz Ensemble opened the show with "Hoyburner."

Junior Stephanie Douglas and Freshman Bruce Grell smile during "Perer Piper," performed by the Limired Edition.

Girls Night Out

Turnabout - the time when girls start that big diet, buy that new dress, and grab that special guy.

The theme of the senior sponsored dance was 'Girl's Night Out'. A girl's night out was what the night of Saturday, December 17 was. The gal had to ask the perfect lad, make all the dinner and dance arrangements, and pick up the tab for the evenings festivities.

Senior Kevin Jandt was elected Turnabout King and crowned by Homecoming Queen, Kelly Rupert. Also in the running for king were Senior Mike Zenz, Junior Kevin Baxter, Sophomore Tom Williams, and Freshman Jeff Shoup.

The dance, which had a large turnout, began at 9:00 pm and continued until 11:30 pm. The cafeteria was decked in red, white and black and red laced garters were given to each couple as they waltzed in the door to dance.

Tickets for couples ran $8.00 if purchased in advance and $10.00 at the door, while tickets for those who attended the dance were $6.00 and $8.00. You could capture the evening with photos that were taken for $5.00. The work of the senior class in putting on the dance paid off as they collected approximately $1,000 in profit. The money was made in order to help pay for prom.

Many girls decided to open their pocket books a little farther and spring for dinner, either before or after a night of dancing. Some popular places to dine were The Dock, The Old Oakes, The Sundance Social Club, and Smuggler's Inn. Others chose more casual dinners including home cooked meals and carry-out pizzas.

-Nancie Derers

Writing on the Turn about sign in sheet are Senior Don Childers and Junior Debbie Sr. Clair.

Barefoot keeps cast of six on their toes

Of all the school activities throughout the school year, one of the most entertaining is the plays.

On February 2nd, 3rd, and 4th at 8:00 p.m. six Berrendorf High School students performed Neil Simons "Barefoot in the Park." Junior Brad Fandel (Delivery Man) said, "Neil Simon writes such funny plays that it's really an experience to be in one."

"That's really what drama's all about," said student director Brian Wadlow, "having fun while gaining experience." During a play the cast and crew become a close-knit group. Freshman Shannon Sipes says, "You spend so much time with the same group of people that you can't help but to make friends."

Actresses and actors share in each others tragedies and triumphs. The triumphs far outweigh the tragedies. For instance, skipping a line or saying it at the wrong time is considered a tragedy. Not just for the person making the mistake, but for the others in the scene. Brad Fandel said, "Everyone almost died when Betsy threw her shoe over the set on Saturday's performance.

"Barefoot" is about a newlywed couple, Corie and Paul Bratter, who undergo the ups and downs of marriage. Corie is impetuous and outgoing while Paul is straightlaced and studious. Corie and Paul were played by Senior Betsy Heninger and Junior Tim Sipes. Senior Kelly Gurke played Corie's proper mother and Senior Craig Furne played Victor Velasco, the man upstairs. Corie sets her mother up on a blind date with Victor Velasco and the following events were chaotic. Junior Todd Shipley, (Telephone man), said, "Although "Barefoot" had a small cast and crew it was a tremendous success. Freshman Jay Douglas said, "I didn't think I'd ever stop laughing." Senior Mitch Groth said, "Drama is the most rewarding high school activity that I can think of." Senior Kelly Gurke agreed when she said, "It gives you a real feeling of accomplishment."

- Karen Fandel

Junior Tim Sipes steps into his role of lawyer Paul Bratter with apparent ease.

Senior Craig Furne (Victor Velasco) reflects on his poor circumstances in hopes of a dinner invitation.

Tim Sipes (Paul Bratter) has trouble standing after a night on the town and is comforted by Senior Kelly Gurke (Mother).

Corie (Senior Betsy Heninger) and Paul (Tim Sipes) help Mother (Senior Kelly Gurke) off with her coat.

Corie cuddles up to Paul while waiting for him to finish his call.

Junior Tim Sipes grimaces over a mouthful of knitch while Kelly Gurke observes skeptically.

Junior Todd Shipley (Telephone Man) attempts to install a phone in the Bratters freezing apartment.

Seniors Kelly Gurke and Bersy Heninger get down to a serious mother-daughter talk.

Corie returns a clipboard to the wheezing Delivery Man (Junior Brad Fandel).

Stairway to Heaven

February 11 was the date couples or singles climbed the 'Stairway To Heaven' at the Sweethearts dance in the cafeteria.

"The band was fascinating and the dancing was out of this world," said Junior Tim Slingsby about the band Coming Attractions.

The band played from 8:00 to 11:30 with a short break at 10:00 when Sophomore Sharon Kendall was crowned queen.

The cafeteria was decorated with rainbow balloons and streamers. "The dance was one of the better organized dances of the year," stated Senior Tony Duncan.

Sweethearts followed last year in that girls could ask guys and guys could ask girls. Because of this, many more people attended. "The night was spectacular!" exclaimed Freshman Taffney Hank summing up the dance.

- Mindi Ringel

Hi everybody down there!

Well, I'm finally in America!! At the beginning I was a little bit homesick, but now, as I'm getting to understand the "American way of life", making new friends, and joining different activities at school, I'm having lots of fun!!

I've met really nice people here, that I'm never going to forget. Time is going so fast! I can't believe that my year in the U.S. is almost gone!!

I'm sure that I'm always going to think of this year as "the year". Spring seems to be coming and I guess I can't say I'm not glad because I love warm weather, but I wish we still had a little bit more snow — after all, I might never see it again! —

Well, hope to hear from you guys soon —
Love ya lots,
Marcela

To all my friends in Kronach, my big dream finally came true — America? Even if not everything was as I expected it to be in the beginning, I'm really enjoying my stay.

I made a lot of new friends and I'm joining the German + French club, which helped me a lot to get used to the new culture and people.

School is so much different from ours. Here, students spend most of their time in or with school and I think, the school system is a lot easier.

You have a large variety of subjects. But all this does not prevent me from looking forward to see you guys soon

Love always,

Krönzi

Love Worldwide

To Everybody:

So, how have you been? I can't believe how fast time is going by. My year here in the U.S. is "almost" over. I met a lot of nice people and made some real good friends.

School here is very different from our school system at home. I think it easier here. Since I am here I have learnt a lot about the United States, people, school and culture and about myself.

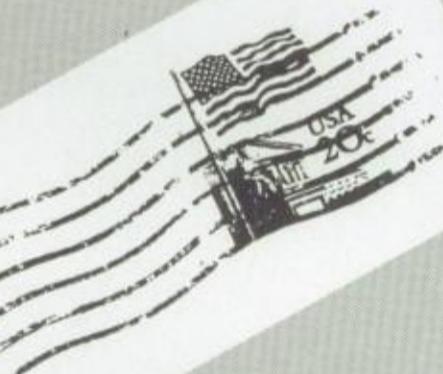

I did a lot of things and visited interesting and famous places, which I hadn't seen when I was on vacation here before. But it isn't always easy to be an exchange student. Sometimes I'm really homesick and miss you all.

But I am very glad, that I had the chance to come and if anyone of you guys ever has the opportunity to go to a foreign country as an exchange student, all I can say is: "Go for it!" It's a really great experience!

So, that's all for today. — Hope to see you all soon!

Love ya lots,

Juli Misdeel

The foreign exchange students this year were (l-r) Gabriele Wistlich, Franziska Kämpf, and Marcela Serra.

Trading places

This year Bettendorf High School was fortunate enough to host three foreign exchange students. Two of them, Franziska Kampf and Gabriele Wistlich were from West Germany while the third, Marcela Serra was from Uruguay.

Franzi, who comes from Bettendorf's sister city, Kronach, Germany, came here to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the first German immigrants in America. She stayed in the home of Howard Sibley.

Gabi, a resident of Frankfort, Germany, lived with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Failli.

Marcela, an American Field Service (AFS) Student, came from Montevideo Uruguay to stay with Mr. and Mrs., Conley Glantz.

Marathon Testing?

One of the most unpopular but essential parts of many junior and seniors' lives was participating in college entrance exams.

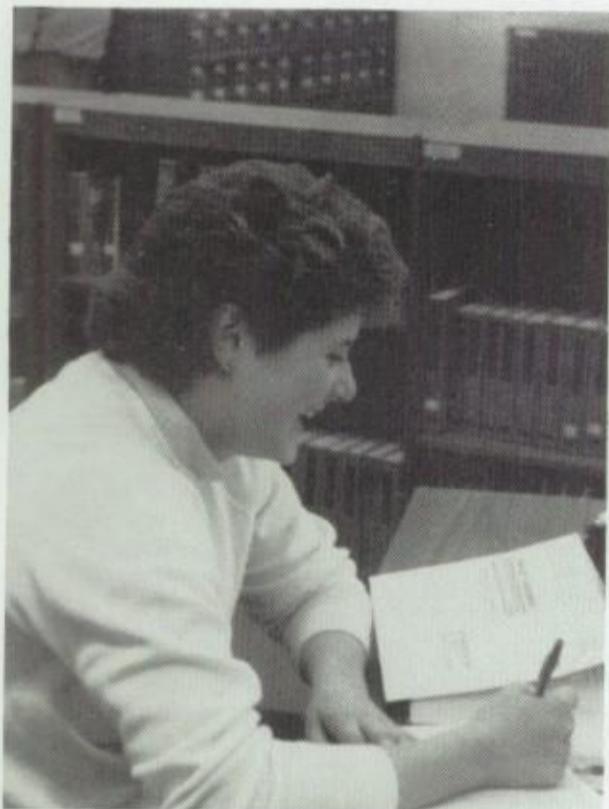

The two tests which are commonly taken are the American College Test (ACT) examination and the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). Both tests are offered at various times throughout the school year for those students planning to attend college.

Testing periods for both examinations were approximately four hours in length and stringently tested the students accumulation of knowledge. "ACT's were demanding and tiring, but worth the effort when it comes to scholarships. I wish we could have had two days to do it," said senior Jeanne Luebke.

While many students found the examinations difficult, others felt they were less laborious. Krista Schoenfelder, '84, said, "The ACT was hard, but not nearly as difficult as the SAT."

Most colleges or universities require applicants to have taken either the ACT or SAT examinations. Whether a student is accepted into an institution depends greatly on their accumulated GPA, their extra curricular activity participation and their ACT scores.

-Beth Hamby

And heeeeeeres the announcers for the '83-84 school year, Seniors Bruce Gerhardt and Sheryl Lamansky

And that's the way it was...

(For best results, read the first paragraph in a loud and demented voice).

And heeeeeerres the announcements for Friday, December 16, 1983.

Please bring food for the food drive - only one can or box of food will help.

Pictures turned in late may be picked up in the activities office.

Wish your friends a Happy Holiday-order a Ho Ho gram today through the 20th. Only 50¢.

For those dining in the cafeteria, the main entree for Saturday will be filet mignon with asparagus tips in a white cream sauce. Chocolate mousse or cheesecake is your choice of desserts. Of course a fine white wine will be served with the meal. Enjoy!

Sound familiar? If you read it in a deep pitch and slurred your words from tenor to soprano, you probably had a pretty good imitation of Bruce Gerhardt. He and Sheryl Lamansky took turns reading the announcements during the school year.

Gerhardt, who has been reading announcements since his junior year, admitted he was nervous at first. He went from nervous to bored. "I started out just reading through them, but it got boring and I wanted to make them a little more fun," stated Gerhardt. Fun isn't the word that describes how he read the announcements. Crazy and weird seemed more appropriate. "I think his tone of voice is entertaining," commented math teacher Mrs. Nancy McBride.

Lamansky, who started reading the announcements for her first time this year, was also nervous the first time she read the announcements. The words that were racing through her mind were "Oh my God, the whole school is listening!"

The whole school was listening when Lamansky and Kelly Gurke attempted to do the announcements together. "We were doing fine until Kelly came to the word symposium. She pronounced it synopsis and we both started cracking up," stated Lamansky. That soon ended Kelly's career in announcing. The part of the announcements that seemed to interest the students most was the conclusion when the birthdays were announced. Here were some of the more memorable ones.

"And this just handed to me- today is Jennifer Coins birthday. She's 17, but she would be very embarrassed if you came up to her in the halls and wished her a Happy Birthday. This was given to me by the Greek Consulate in Chicago.

Of course the reaction was just the opposite-everyone went up to her and wished her a happy birthday.

Another humorous birthday was Pat McNally's. He turned 17, but this was what was heard over the speaker.

"Friday is Pat McNally's 18th birthday and he is going to Wisconsin (pause) for the Bettendorf-Madison game!"

Gerhardt and Lamansky talked into a telephone when they read the announcements. Dropping the phone while talking, saying weenie and beans instead of weiner and beans were just a few of the bloopers that have happened to the two seniors. Even so, it was a lots of fun listening to those crazy announcements.

And thars the way it was, for Friday, December 16, 1983. Good Day!

Wall dividers, a few windows and a lot of modern design make up the school building. But it takes more than a building to join the students, teachers and administrators at BHS. It takes a feeling.

Within the next few pages are the people of Bettendorf High School all of whom are an important part of the feeling we share.

Although as the years go by the faces are going to change, the memories of high school will still remain in our minds, joining us together.

Senior Memories

It's funny to sit back and think of all the "things" you used to do as an innocent freshman - you feared the thought of a senior trying to sell you a bridge pass. You remember the day you were looking for the cafeteria and you ended up in automotives. You absolutely cringe at the thought of the time you walked across the middle of the gym floor and every senior started yelling at you.

Although it happened years ago, it seems like only yesterday. Where have all the times gone- the football game when it was 30 degrees and pouring rain, the informal dances when you were scared to death when a slow song came on, the formal dance when dear old dad had to be the friendly "chauffer" and your mom turned into a photography nut- those are the times you won't forget.

Then there are the times you'd rather forget altogether. The infamous and dreaded term paper, the Saturday morning when you had to get up at 7:00 a.m. to take ACT's which could make or break your future, running out of gas on the way to school, in the middle of the parking lot and your first wreck in the family car.

Those times are gone, but not forgotten. It's hard as a senior to believe that high school can now only be referred to as a memory. What the future holds in store for us is undetermined, but it can easily be said that the best is yet to come, whether you choose to further your education in college; get a job or just be on your own.

Although our last days at B.H.S. mark the end of our high school days they also mark the beginning of the rest of our lives. So forget the bad memories and leave them behind looking forward to a bright future with everything you do.

License to freedom

Oh what an awful picture . . . what am I saying?! My driver's license, I'm free!

As I walked out of the driver's license bureau I couldn't believe this little piece of plastic in my hand could give me such a great feeling of freedom.

While driving home I thought of the summer I got up at 6:00 every morning to go to driver's ed. There was no doubt on my mind that one summer of sacrifice was worth a lifetime of freedom.

Since the day I got my license, my bicycle seat has accumulated inches of dust and the farthest I have walked is from my car to the door of school. I realize my dependence on my car when the mere possibility of not having my car one day sets me in a state of panic.

After awhile the novelty of being able to drive starts to wear off. After the fourth time to the store for my mom to get car food I realized it wasn't that great.

At times it may even seem as though driving can be a curse. I got the full meaning of this curse when I backed out of the garage and I didn't open the garage door first.

Although this meant the end of my driving for a while, I was grateful when my freedom was returned.

The non-year?

You're almost there,
but you can't get ahead.
The Seniors won't let you,
You try it, you're dead."

The teachers all know you,
And remember your name.
You dread to know why,
And they feel the same.

The freshmen adore you,
And follow everywhere.
You just can't stand them,
But they don't care.

The first day of school,
's off campus for chow.
You think you're so cool,
Boy! You're the upperclassmen now!

The Seniors can tolerate you,
Underclassmen, you hate.
You think you're God's gift.
But you can't get a date.

You can't wait to be a Senior,
There's only one year now.
You're almost ready,
Being a Junior . . .
is just learning how.

Dating several people from other schools is an opportunity for fun, excitement and possibly a little heart break. Picture in your mind going out with someone from Central, Assumption and Pleasant Valley all at the same time. Because of the risk of being caught, football can be a hazardous season. But how do you explain to both of them that you can't possibly go to the Central-Assumption game without causing a little suspicion on their parts?

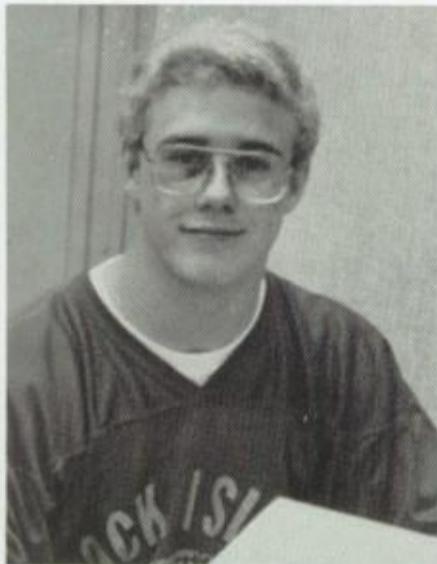

After you calm all their fears by going out with one of them each day of the weekend you can sit back and relax . . . or can you? The next major catastrophe will be the holiday season. Having a few weeks off of school gives all three of your romances a chance to drop by. Unannounced. This could be a disaster if number three drops by while number one is already there. This, however, can be avoided by making all three of them aware of your plans so there is no danger of a "surprise" visit.

As vacation nears an end you have to make the big decision. Who do you spend Christmas day with? You may think this is a difficult time for you but it can be especially frustrating for your family. Younger sisters and brothers can also be hazardous to your situation. Your whole set-up could be ruined in a flash if your little sister happens to mention how cute she thinks number one and number two are while number three is there for Christmas dinner. After an embarrassing silence the matter is dropped.

Aftrer a holiday season filled with making up "stories" to tell everyone and sneaking around you decide to give up the exciting world of dating more than one person at a time. An idea pops into your head. College! If the people you date are far away from each other keeping them separate will be easy . . . after all, you can always burn their letters!

The Hard Rock Cafe

The Hard Rock Cafe, otherwise known as the cafeteria, has always been a place for students to gather with friends. For some students the cafeteria is just a place to eat lunch. Others find it a good place to sit and catch up on the latest gossip.

Somehow, the cafeteria seems to change from year to year. Most freshmen wouldn't dare walk through the cafeteria alone-heaven forbid some upperclassmen may think of you as a loner! Consequently, most freshmen (especially girls) will run through the cafeteria, giggling as if they hadn't a care in the world, except getting out of the eyesight of a senior!

Your sophomore year is just a slight variation of your freshman year. You may walk through alone, but now you just pretend you're looking for someone. (You still feel as though every eye in the place is looking at you as if you were crazy.)

Ahh . . . the wonderful junior year. You start to realize that nobody really cares who walks through the cafeteria alone or accompanied. Since you're an upperclassman now, you really don't care whether or not anyone looks at you, and if they look at you funny, you know you can give them a stare that will turn them right back around!

Then there's the big senior year. You can now walk through the cafeteria alone with all the confidence and poise in the world. You and your friends can be as queer as you please-no freshman is even going to try to give you a threatening stare, after all it just wouldn't be fair to deprive anyone else from the joys of "growing up" in the cafeteria.

Surviving the slump

The sophomore slump . . . Just what exactly is this infamous slump -A question you sophomores "to be" may have asked? No, it is not the school's version of "Friday the 13th- where after 4 years of being a sophomore repeatedly, the student goes on a mad rampage,

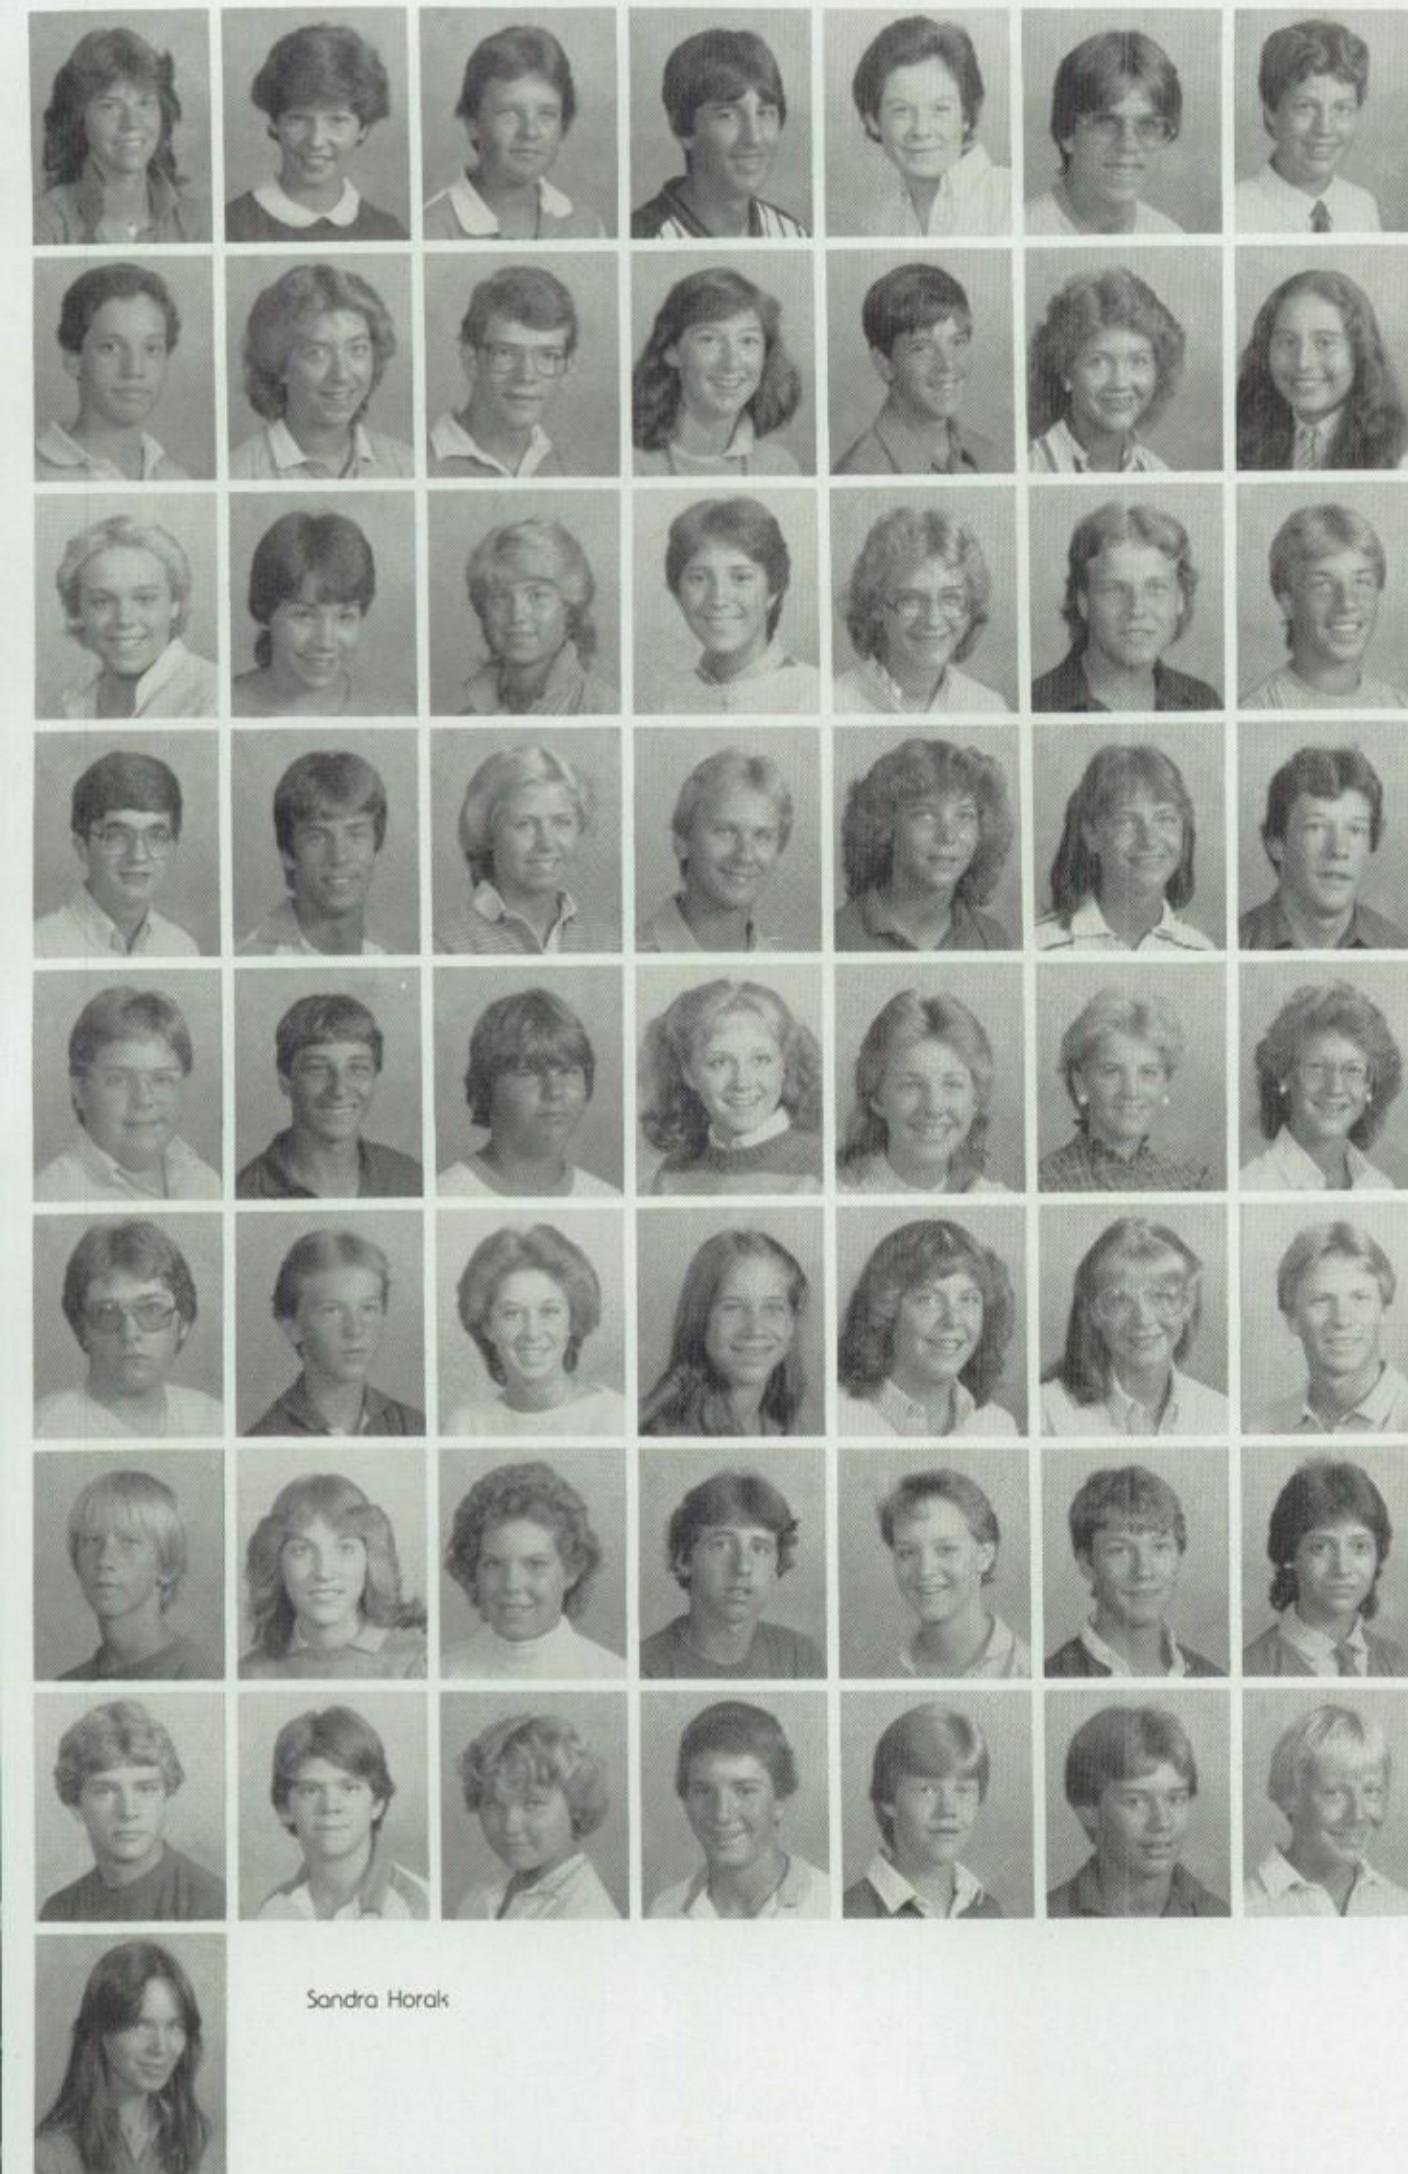

The slump is a time when absolutely nothing goes right. Your grades, as well as your "budding" social life goes downhill. The question is why? As a freshman, you've been told that high school is a lot harder than Middle-school- you've got to buckle down- so they tell you.

No longer a measly freshman, you decide to play it cool this year. No algebra, no problem . . That's what you think - but only for a while, because no sooner do you think "No more studying!" - along come those postulates and theorems- not the kids stuff, as you had thought. Then there is English. The dreaded term paper. I'm sure! Six weeks to write one paper, it can't be too hard. Actually with six weeks it's pretty easy . . . But in three days? Thats another story. Next on the Agenda, Julius Caeser. Need I say more?

But you'd seem to think being a sophomore you'd have nothing but time on your hands to do homework. Why? Because the slump comes at the point in your high school life when you're not "old enough to drive", but far to 'mature' to be seen by your friends, being chauffeured all around town by your parents. So, one would think that homework is all you do, the only extra-curricular activity you participate in. One look at that report card, and it becomes obvious that this is not true. So, what exactly do you sophomores do anyway?

The mystery remains

Soap withdrawal

It all begins the day of registration. The fear sets in, you get nervous and start to experience withdrawal symptoms . . . how could you counselor possibly do this to you? He (or she) has scheduled you for a class 5th period and then again 8th period-the two most crucial off periods of the day! You have to find a way out of this horrid situation, even if it means dropping a class you need to graduate. Let's see if you drop the class you have first and then switch your 5th period class to first and switch your 8th period to your gym period and then persuade your counselor to let you drop gym all together, them MAYBE it will all work out.

You go to your counselor with some story about how you have to pick up your kid brother, Pee-Wee, at the bus stop at noon and tell him your boss is threatening to fire you unless you can work the 3:00 shift, and from there all you can do is hope for the best! (It never hurt anyone to shed a tear over a crucial matter).

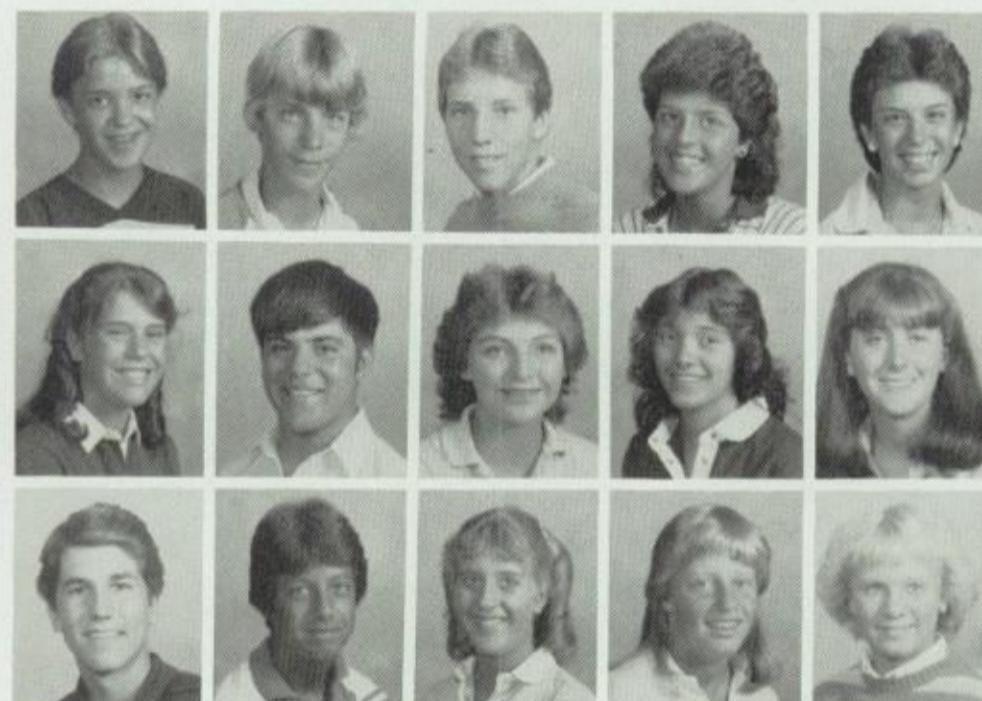

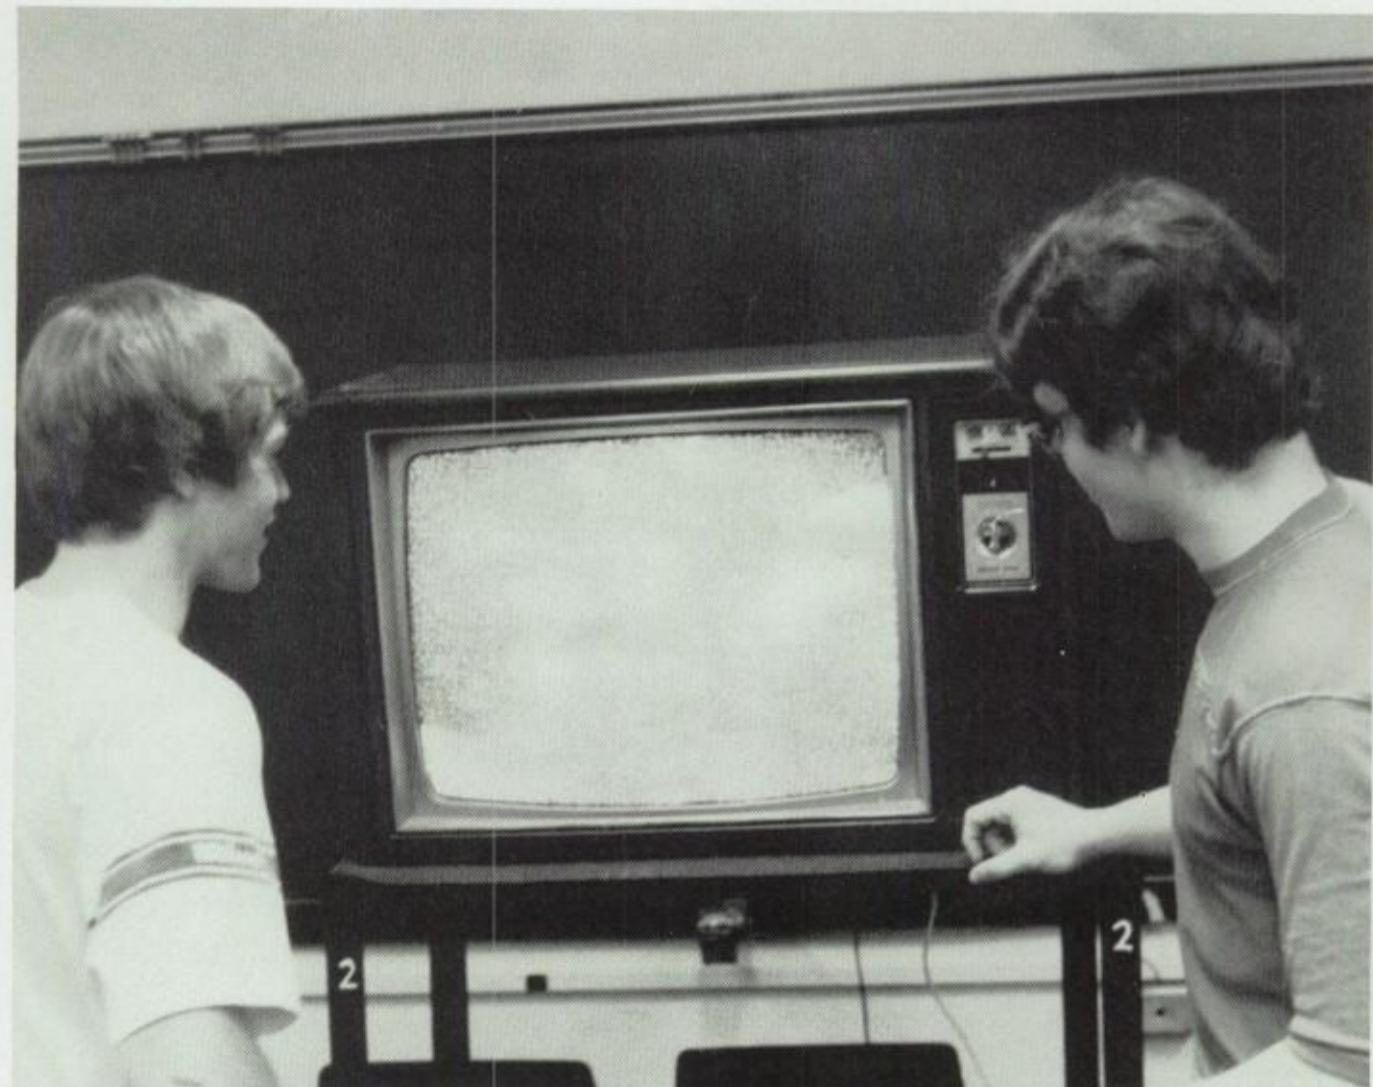

Once you get the O.K. from your counselor (I might add, he is now your best friend) you're home free! Now you can run to your car at the beginning of 4th period and speed home in time to catch the beginning of "The Young and the Restless," and see what Jack and Jill are up to today. Now that you've gotten 5th period off you can also catch the beginning of "All my Children" and at least get an idea of what the day's episode will contain.

Then its time to race back to reality at school, until 8th period when you return to soap opera city and catch the last half of "General Hospital" and catch up on the adventures of Luke and Laura or Luke and Connie or Luke and Holly, or whoever!

Whatever the program and whoever the viewer, there is certainly an "addiction" among teenagers-and adults-to those crazy shows that entrap you in their mysterious love triangles.

Courtyard: a place to . . .

Do you remember carving your boyfriend's name in the benches in the courtyard with your Bic disposable, during the summer and then in the Spring find out that you are sitting on the same bench crossing it out? What about when it is snowing? What can you do in the snow? Not much you say Ha-Ha. "I can remember making Snow Angels on the hill, then running up to the bridge soaking wet to look at them, what fun," said Senior Bridget Hamilton.

Now that we have matured and have become a year older what does the courtyard mean to the Sophisticated Sophomore? "A place to go after being caught off campus five times for eating lunch," said Sophomore Matt Branum.

Ahhh, upperclassmen. Yes, the big time height of all four years. "The courtyard, for me, was a place to go for lunch when mom and dad wouldn't let me drive the car to school," said Senior Kris Johnson. As Juniors the courtyard had great appeal for the annual snowball fight, making sure that Mr. Kelly was out to lunch first.

Finally, a Senior. Most Seniors don't even know where the courtyard is located anymore they so rarely populate the area. As Seniors, the courtyard holds memories. The things that had happened there are wrapped up into one. The courtyard was fun for high school, but the memories are even better.

Family Affair

Freshman year, what a difficult time. Stuck on the low rung of the ladder where older classmates discriminate against you. During this delicate time, it is an added burden to have an upperclassmen for a brother or sister. It's bad enough to be sent to automotives by a senior who told you it was Algebra, but when you are a freshman, things become inherently worse when an older sibling happens to frequent the same school.

"A lot of Mike's friends tease me," pointed out Freshman Stacey Clark, "I'm at an advantage of knowing a lot of older people with him as my brother."

Having a brother or sister at school can turn out to be a heaven or hell for the upperclassman, too. Although having to stick up for somebody is a noble thing to do, having someone to follow your every move or playing freshmen chauffeur is not when there are more important things to do.

Siblings have always had fights and perpecces, but sometimes there is nobody closer. At school or at home, they sometimes turn out to be the friend in need. When you need help on homework, that's who you turn to. When you need help convincing Mom and Dad that this class or that the subject is tough, your brother or sister will be at your side. There's no better or more hair-raising feeling in high school than having a brother or sister there with you.

Teachers both friend and foe

Remember freshman year, the algebra you didn't understand and your teacher stayed after school until 4:30 when you finally realized what a polynomial was.

Then sophomore year came and your baby sister tore your whole stack of notecards. Your English teacher calmly extended your deadline two weeks after you spent the whole night in tears wondering what to tell your parents about the "F" you thought you were going to get.

Your junior year proved to be even better, you got your first status report. You had absolutely no idea what a mole was so you flunked your first quarter. You did about 40 points of extra credit and brought your grade up to a D-. Your chemistry teacher then sent your parents a Happy Bulldog to inform them that you were now passing!

Your senior year was the big time. You had to decide what to do with your life. Is it the Navy or college? All your teachers willingly write six recommendations so you get accepted to one of your top choices of schools.

No matter what grade you're in, there is always a teacher there ready to help you.

Keeping order on campus

And you thought your job was tough! Have you ever really looked at what the administration does? Boy they sure don't have it easy. There is so much work to running a school that I don't think I would ever like to be a Principal or even an Assistant Principal.

I took this assignment of following a principal around all day thinking that it would be easy and that I could probably sit around in the office all day. Boy was I wrong!

For half of the day I followed Mr. Kelly around, and for the second half of the day I followed Mr. Jensen around; I was ready to go home at 11:30!

Here is an example of how the day went:
7:30 a.m. there is a mandatory meeting for all the administrators.

8:00 a.m. Mr. Kelly introduced himself and I introduced myself and explained to him exactly what I wanted to do.

8:10 a.m. We had to take care of some pink slips from the day before and for this morning.

9:15 a.m. We went to evaluate a teacher for thirty minutes. Was she nervous!

9:45 a.m. A fire alarm was set off by a student and we had to go shut it off. I never knew that Mr. Kelly could run so fast!

10:00 a.m. We walked around the school to see if any students were goofing off in the locker bays.

10:17 a.m. He checked his schedule to see if there were any parent conferences scheduled for that day.

10:30 a.m. Mr. Kelly had a conference with a mother and a student to see if the student could get back in school after being expelled for getting into a fight.

11:00 a.m. I went to lunch, while Mr. Kelly went his way and Mr. Jensen stayed in the office.

12:35 p.m. Mr. Jensen was in his office sorting out the monitoring schedules for semester tests. And he had me help him.

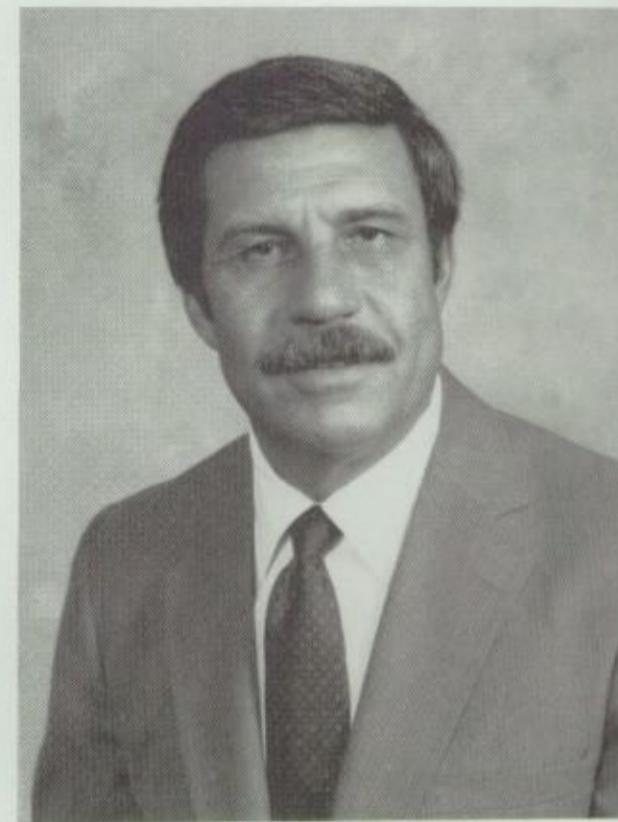

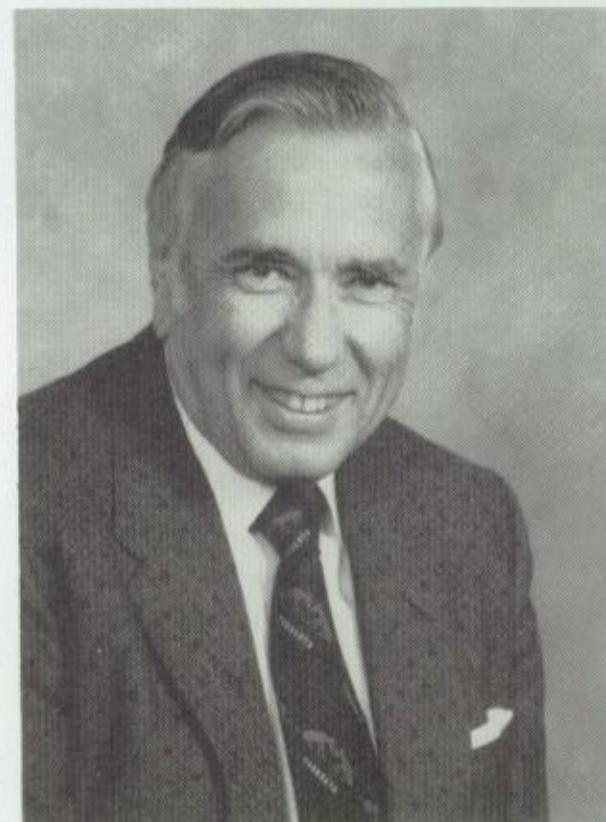

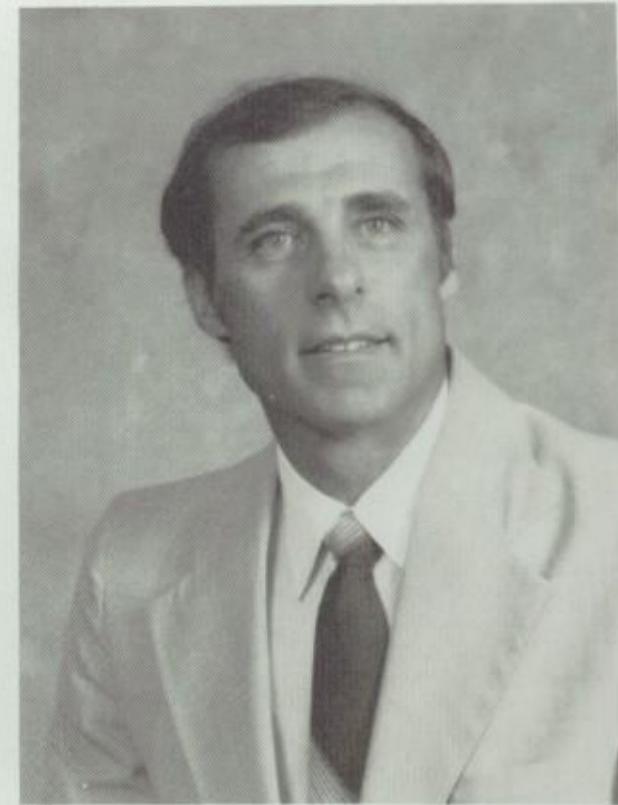

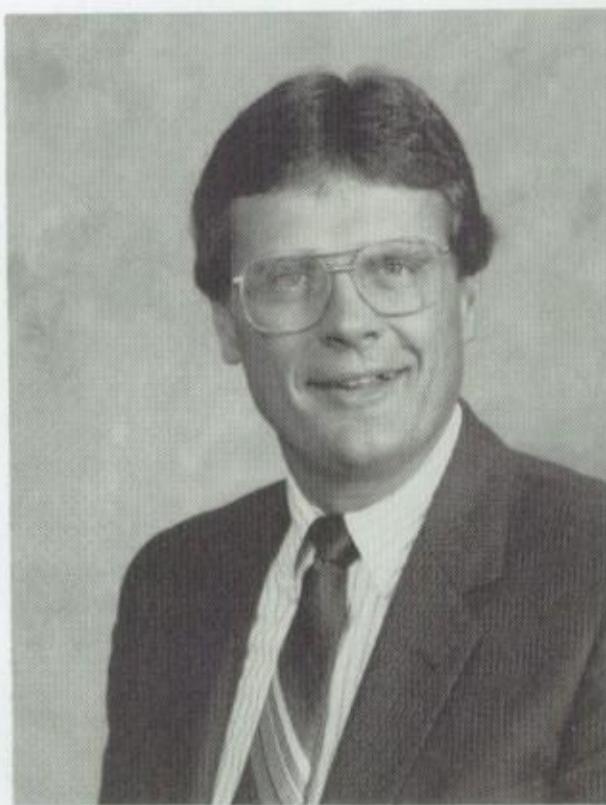

1:50 p.m. A balloon lady came in dressed up in a "bunny" outfit wanting to deliver balloons to a senior guy. While Mr. Kelly, Mr. Jensen and Mr. Peterson sat by with big grins on their faces the senior came down and collected his balloons from the lady.

2:15 p.m. We finally got back to doing the schedule for the semester tests, and sat and talked until 3:15. That day I spent with the Assistant Principals was one of the most rewarding days I have spent at B.H.S. this year. And I swear and vow that I will not say another thing about how their job is easy or that they are unfair in any way. Because they are doing a very good job of running this school.

And I don't think ANY one of us could do it better.

They keep the system running

Superintendent Rob MacNaughton and assistant superintendents Tom Patterson and Dr. Wayne Rand are the administrators of the Bettendorf school system. They keep the system running by controlling our budget, curriculum, personnel, and almost everything else in our school system.

This marked MacNaughton's first year as superintendent. His job involves many things such as budget and the development and maintaining of a quality school district. MacNaughton likes his job because working with problems is challenging and it "has a direct effect on education."

He is pleased that students overall are "more conscientious about school today" and that the "serious approach" should rise in the future.

Assistant superintendent Patterson's job entails the supervision of instruction and curriculum for all students K-12.

Even after working for the Bettendorf school system for sixteen years, he finds his job "a challenge," especially "trying to change the curriculum."

Patterson advises students to "take their work seriously," because employers "pay more attention to high school and college grades now more than ever."

The newest administrator is assistant superintendent Dr. Wayne Rand, who came to Bettendorf from Central City, Iowa last September. Dr. Rand said he came to Bettendorf because the school system "has an excellent reputation" and that Bettendorf is a larger area. His job involves business management, staff negotiations, personnel and buildings and grounds.

Dr. Rand says he likes what he is doing now and likes Bettendorf "very much." Dr. Rand also said that he and his family like the people they have met and the community in general because Bettendorf "retains a rural flavor."

As for the future of Bettendorf, the administrators find the new school, north elementary, a necessity, important to the development and progress of Bettendorf as a community.

After school is out and most students leave for jobs or to goof off there are many who stay at school until 6:00 or even later. They are BHS athletes.

Every sports team, their coaches and trainers are a great source of pride for our school. Whether they are home or away there is always a crowd of fans to cheer them on to victory, or to console them after a heartbreakin loss.

Through the years BHS has excelled in sports with winning teams. The great feeling of representing the school and working together as a team is just one more way of joining students together as a team is whether it is on the field, in the pool, on the court or in the stands cheering.

Incredible

The summer of 1983 will go down in BHS baseball history. The varsity, in accomplishing the first winning season ever and a school record 20 wins, also advanced to the sub-state where they fell short of the state playoffs by losing to Cedar Rapids Kennedy, 3-1. Still, it was the furthest any Bettendorf baseball team squad had ever gone in state competition. "We came within one game of state!" exclaimed senior Mark Burn.

"We thought we'd have a good year, but we didn't know we'd set a school record for wins and have such a fine finish," said Head Coach Denny Theissen, "we've finally turned the season around with good players and a winning attitude."

The emergence of the Bulldog program has come about as a result of the ever growing numbers of experienced players. Years ago, opposing teams could laugh and smirk at the number of seniors the squad had. Now, the Dawgs have the last laugh.

While experience was no problem for the varsity, the sophomores squad turned out to be another story. Preceding a team which had accomplished a 16-3 mark and a conference championship the year before is never an easy task, but it becomes even harder when there is a lack of seasoned veterans. Three sophs, Dennis Gell, Trent Snowden, Jerry Williams, were lost for many of the games due to promotions at the varsity level. All three started as freshman, so head coach Jerry Roskens' crew had to start from scratch.

"Some of the freshman got good experience at many of the positions," pointed out 2nd baseman Scott Toole, a current soph. "Now we have four or five starters returning."

Maybes. Could've. Should've. They ran throughout the sophs. season haunting them at every step. Those three strange coblins seemed to be most destructive in one-run games.

"We had a couple of rough breaks explained Junior Mike Peckenschneider. "We had a lot of games that we lost by one run!"

A lot is not the word for it. Of the eleven losses, seven were heartbreakers, one-run defeats. On the other end of the stick, they won only three close ball games all year; 2-1 over Muscatine, a 5-4 win again at P.V. and a 4-2 decision against North Scott. Looking for definition of Frustrating? You've found it.

"We could've made up that one run with a hit here or there, but that's the breaks," explained Peckenschneider.

"We did well," commented Roskens. "we had some injuries and some sophomore move up, but we'll start next year with about half of our squad back, so there's something to look forward to."

SOFTBALL

Frustrating!

What can you say? This summer wasn't the greatest for the Girls' Softball teams. The varsity posted a disappointing 9-32 record while the Sophs. pulled in with a 2-16 mark, yet there is hope on the horizon for the BHS softballers.

"We were rebuilding," pointed out Junior Tory Snyder, "most of the people that played this year had never played varsity before." With only two seniors on the team, Kris Samms and Jeani Cowen, it had to be a "rebuilding" year. Inexperience was the main denominator in the softballer's success, or lack of it.

"It was a disappointing year," commented head Coach Gary Altman, "Although we had a number of young inexperienced players ... at least we made some progress throughout the season."

Altman feels that one of the problems both the coaches and the players must face is the lack of a strong softball program for younger girls in Bettendorf. That puts the girls at a disadvantage in game experience and proper fundamentals.

"We started from scratch," said Soph. team coach Art Kitzman. "The girls that played this year hadn't played for two to three years, if at all ... they had to learn and develop from the gam experience."

"A lot of players didn't have much past experience," added Soph. Kell Schone, "fast pitch was an all new experience!"

Having only 3 Sophomores on the team, the Bullpups had a large amount of 8th graders (current freshmen) on the roster. Many of the younger girls were forced into starting roles as rookies, and it is tough to win when your team is learning on the field. But as Kitzman pointed out, "We had a real young team that progressed throughout the season."

With a 4-2 season overall and second in the conference, what more could be said?

"It was an excellent season, the girls really showed a lot of effort," said Coach Beth Davis. "They improved immensely as individuals and as a team, I'm very proud of them," she added.

Spikers show depth

When it came down to the tournaments the Varsity Volleyball team deserved a pat on the back. "We didn't do as well as we expected during the regular season, but we did real well when sectionals came," said senior Jill Habenicht.

"Our season went fairly well, our dual meets didn't go as well, but the team played a lot better at tournaments," said senior Berh Bargman.

When a lot of people wonder where you are going to go with the season that didn't start out so good, it was a real turnaround to see them get through the first game of sectionals. They were down two games and returned with three and that made them go on to the sectionals against Clinton, where they had the upset. Clinton went on to take the state award.

"The season started out pretty slow, but when it really counted we pulled the team together. I think we might have gotten further if we had a better start," said senior Laura Dues, Most Valuable Player. "We had a lot of depth on the team because which we proved at the Knoxville tournament when our starting setters were gone. We didn't fail, we had people there who were more than ready to fill in the empty places, and they did a really great job, I think that's important and things like that really make a team," said Dues. What's in store for next year's varsity volleyball season?

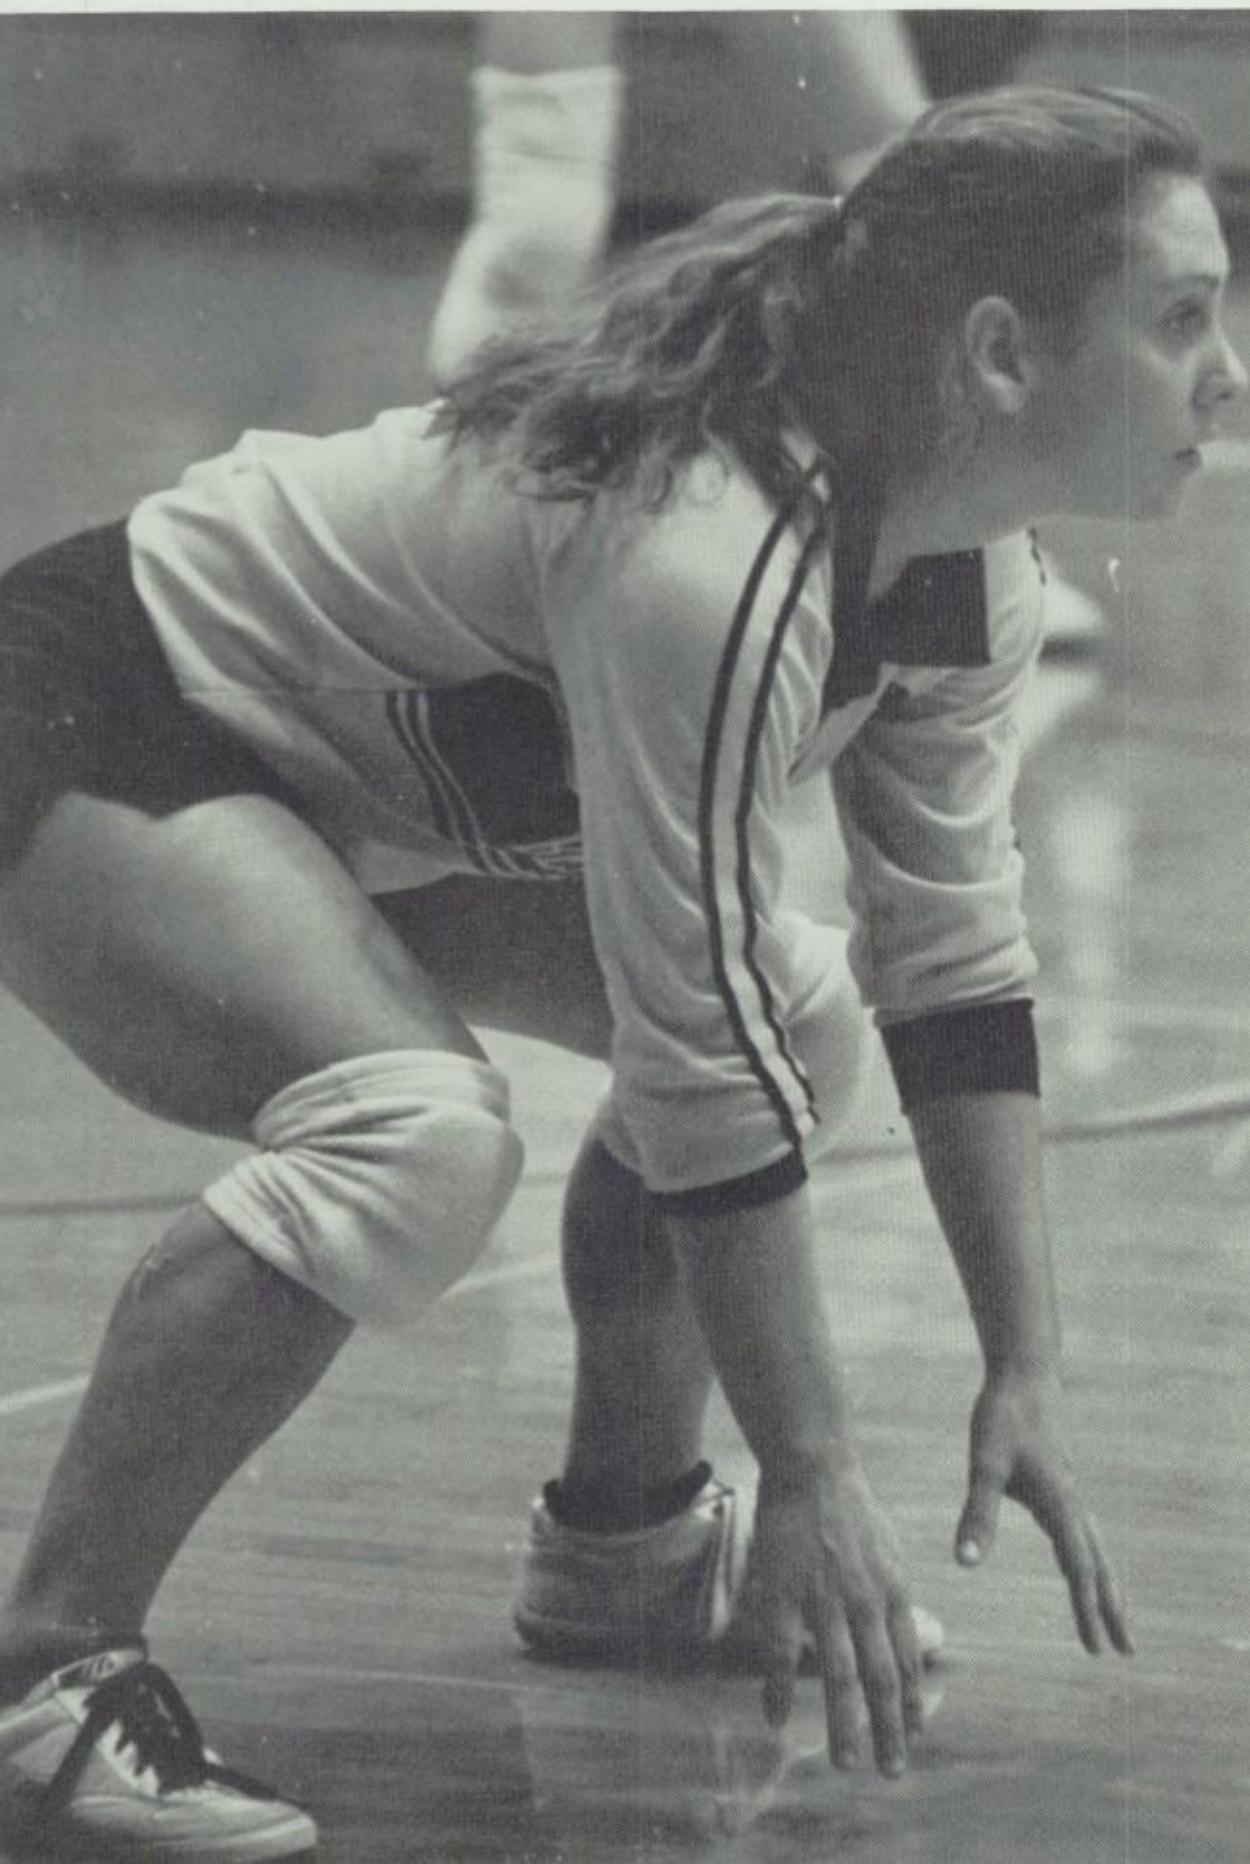

"We have a real good nucleus. Out of nine girls we have four returning lettermen," said coach Dave Curlott, "We should be respectable."

Summing up the varsity volleyball season Coach Curlott said "During the season we were very inconsistent, but at state we played very well. We had good timing and we beat some good teams. I'm very happy with the ending."

-Barb Lay

Senior Jill Habenicht is an example of the tenacious determination that was the trademark of the '83 squad.

The loss to Clinton in the sectionals meant the end for seniors Laura Dues, Terri Stang and Shelly Smith.

Boys' take 3rd

To put it bluntly, the 1983 edition of the Boys Cross Country team was the schools best ever. Under the eye of rookie Coach Ben Pennington, the team finished third in the State meet at Ames. Pennington took over as coach after Cherck Nolting accepted the job as Athletic Director starting this season.

In Ames the Dogs placed three runners in the top twenty; no easy feat. The effort was led by Junior Jeff Koos, who came from nowhere to take 3rd place. Seniors Steve Hunter and Cam Kirkpatrick followed in 13th and 18th respectively.

The highlight of the season had to be the teams performances at the Conference and District meets.

The Conference meet was held in Clinton, and the River Kings were two-time defending State Champions. The Dogs showed what they were made of as they walked away with a slim one point victory (32-33) and the Championship. The scene was repeated at Districts one week later as the 'Dogs and Clinton were separated by two points, with Bettendorf claiming the Championship again.

The season also proved to be a good one for the "little mad men" Sophomore team. As a group of talented runners without a star, they showed their incredible depth by taking a respectable 4th in the Conference meet.

"Both squads had good years" stated State runner Kent Voerberg, "it was a fun year."

The year will be remembered by the team for its fun moments. No one will ever find out who threw the Freshman in the lagoon, and how Koos got his head stuck in a window will never be revealed.

Girls' earn 2nd at State

For Coach Marta Brooks and her 1983 Girls Cross Country team, this season was nothing short of a dream. The girls not only came home from Ames with a second place State trophy, but also claimed a Conference Championship along the way.

Sensational is the only word that can be used to describe the performances of Sophomore Julie Huderz, who topped off her undefeated season with an all-time State best 11:06, topping the former record held by Jan Hall of George by 8 full seconds.

But by no means was this a one person show. Freshman Sara Roberson came into her own when it counted, and ended her impressive initial season with a 6th place finish at State. Three more "Sensational Sophs" Julie Waterman, Tina Manning and Sharon Sassen added the much needed depth to the State team.

Before being promoted to the varsity, Sassen led the Sophomore team to a third place Conference finish by claiming the individual title in 13:07.

The Huderz-Roberson combination was also in good form as they took 1st and 3rd, and with the help of Waterman's 9th place finish, they claimed their second straight Conference championship under Brooks.

"We worked hard together and tried to keep up each others spirits," said Waterman stressing the girl's "team" concept.

Dogs' fall short of state

"I thought our team was remarkable" said head Football coach Merv Habenicht assessing the '83' season. "They had a positive attitude and the will to win."

Finishing the regular season 8-1 and ranked second behind arch-rival, and chief nemesis Central, the eventual state champs, was not an easy task. Neither was the Defensive effort of six shut-outs. The "D" stood by the motto; "We can't lose, if they can't score." Nor to be taken for granted was the powerful Bulldog offense which racked up an impressive 224 points behind a talent laden backfield. Halfback Rick Solis, the team MVP became only the second Bulldog back to surpass 1,000 yards mark. Solis, also added 21 touchdowns to lead the Dogs' in the scoring department. Fullback Tim Diamond racked up nearly 300 yards of his own, while being a key blocker for Solis. To complete the backfield, Quarterback Scott Adriano, passed for a respectable 908 yards while hitting favorite targets Eric Paul and Trent Snowden, who finished with 15 receptions apiece. Even with the many achievements that this group earned, it seemed small consolation. There was one goal that just was not to be.

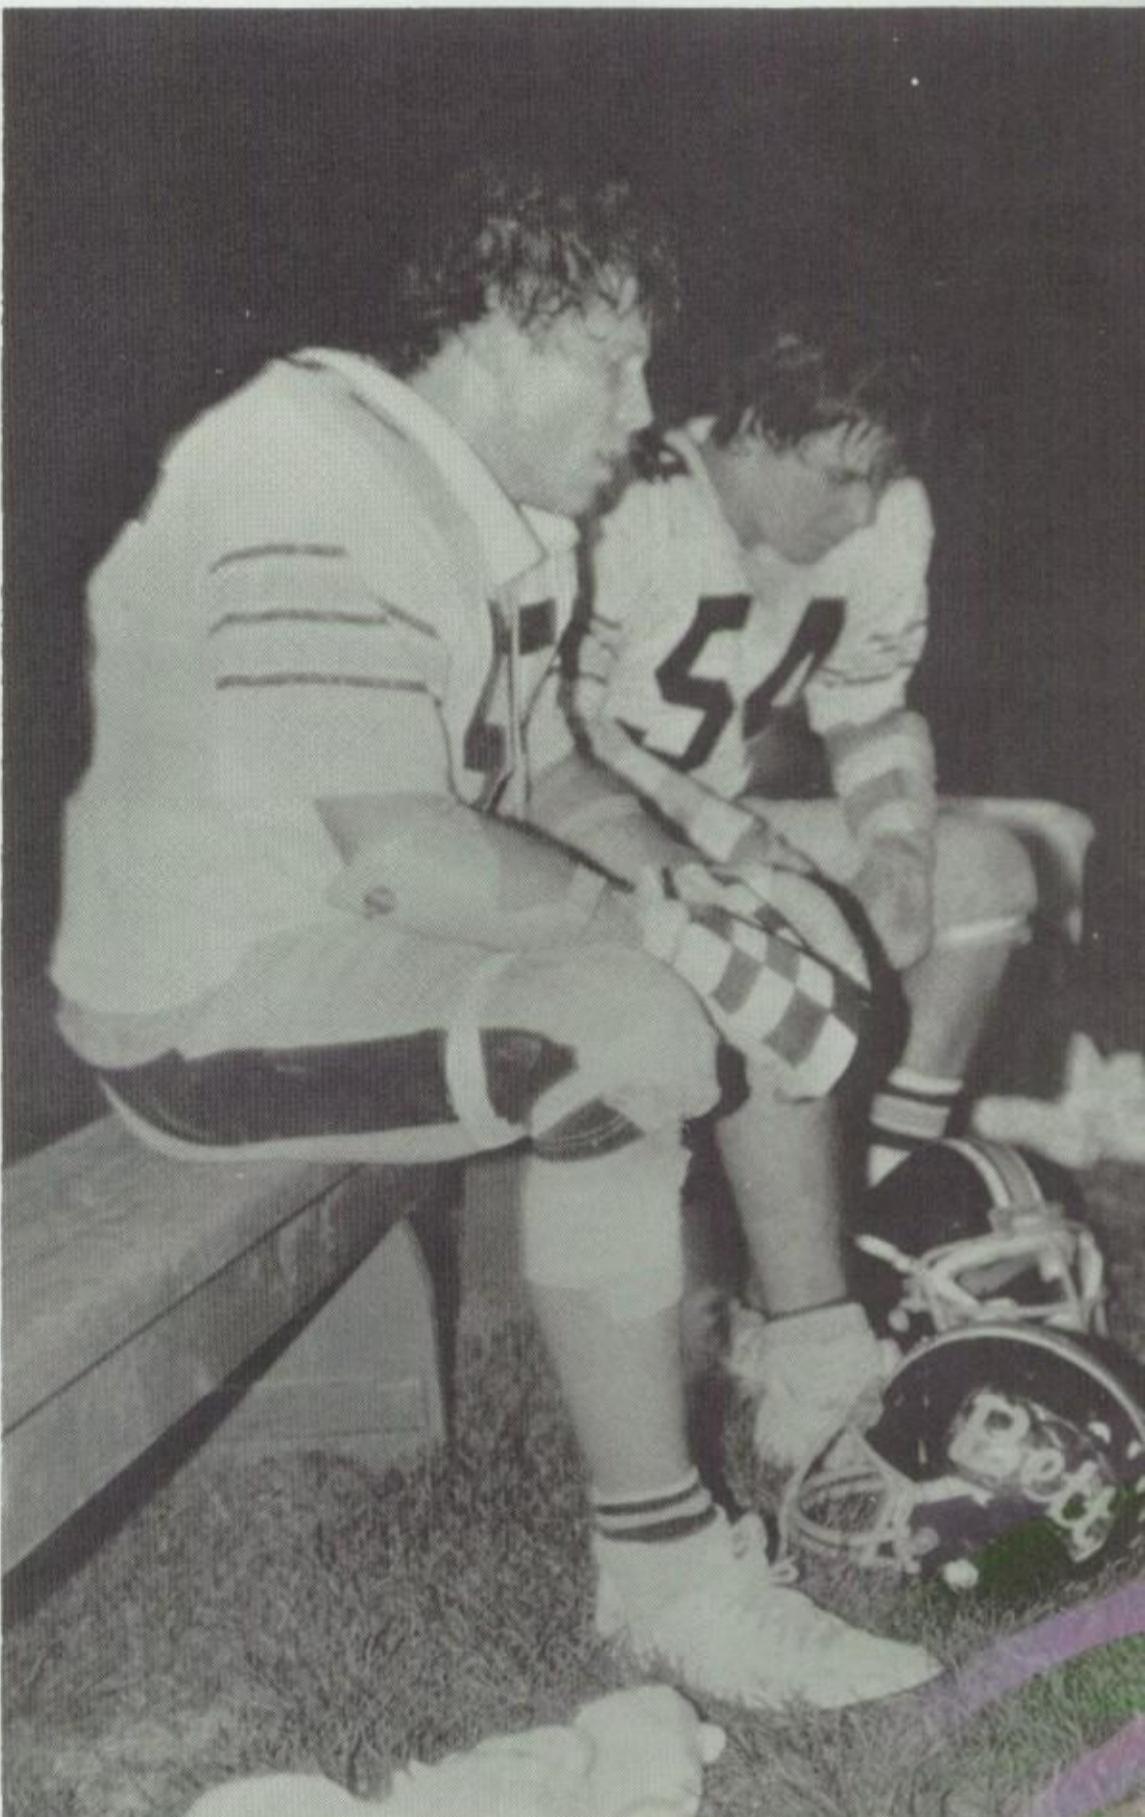

"Our desire to go to the dome was foremost in our minds," said Senior Offensive Tackle Bruce Gerhardt. Added Solis, "I was hoping we could go to the championship game." That hope, their "dream", was in the Bulldogs' grasp. After being defeated by Central 34-8 at mid-season, the gridders rallied to win their three remaining games to earn a playoff bid, and a rematch against Central. Late in the second quarter, with the score tied at 7, the biggest down of the year decided the game and the fate of this team. Central faced 4th, and 20 as QB Mike Burke dropped back to pass. Defensive Tackle Mark Welsh broke loose and flew in. With Welsh less than a step away, Burke hurled the ball into the endzone and hit his receiver to put Central up 14-7. They never seriously looked back after that. "Although we came off the field as losers, I think every one knew that we had tried our best," said junior Trent Snowden. "It would've been nice to beat Central once in my career," reflected Welsh, "but I guess it just wasn't meant to be."

That could be the epitaph of the '83 team. That is, if one wished to dwell on the negative. If you looked to the bright side of things, you might remember all the achievements; the eight victories, and the joyful Fridays. Team members will remember the togetherness . . . the team meetings, practices, movies and meals. This will be a season not soon forgotten.

Pups' fall short

"Mental errors . . . that is what killed us this year", said Byran Wolfe in summing up this 1983 sophomore football season.

Under first year head Coach Ron Eggar, the team posted a respectable 4-5 mark, with all four of the wins coming in succession after a 0-2 start. "We tried to develop the importance of team attitude" commented Altman. "We felt this was the best thing." The "team" concept was especially visible in the efforts against the Davenport schools, after giving up 34 points in their opening game loss to Davenport Central, they settled down to beat eventual Conference Champion Davenport West 14-12, and then after shutting out Davenport Assumption 24-0, they got revenge against Central, by claiming an exciting 24-22 victory.

"The injuries were our biggest problem" said Tom Williams. "We had key people hurt at key times." On the other hand, this years' freshman squads' were plagued by freshman errors. The Gold squad exemplified the word, "team defense" by holding foes to a mere 7.4 points per game. Yet, they ended up (1-3-2). "We didn't score too many points, but our defense rose to the occasion, . . . most of the time," said Mark Bakeris. The Black squad turned out to be the heartache team, by losing many close games. Ending (3-5) certainly wasn't an appropriate fate for this team. They lost to Assumption 8-0 and East Moline 13-12.

Coach Altman puts it into proper perspective: "Yes, there is a bright future here in Bettendorf, and we are watching it happen."

"Early Birds" go undefeated

Bzz . . . MOAN . . . 5:15, time to get up. (moan again) Off to practice again. This scene may not be familiar to you, as most of us lie in bed at this desolate, and unheard of hour. For the girls swim team, it is a ritual to rise early, and go to practice—often in their jammies and slippers. Up and down the pool an average of 120 times (3,000 yds.), and twice that in the afternoon.

What a way to start the day? "It was worth it," claimed Tess Judge, senior Co-Captain of the Varsity swim team, referring to their fine season in which the team went undefeated in dual meets, nor an easy thing to do. Then came the Conference meet. The girls placed second, just two points behind the leaders, Clinton. At districts, however; the tankers proved their fine season would continue. They took first place, and swimmers Annette Swetish, and Molly Seitz (both juniors) became individual champions, in the 50 free and 500 free, respectively. Onto the state meet in Fort Dodge went the team, sending eight qualifiers: Kirsten Rodenbeck, Kitty Flynn, Tess Judge, Melanie Pritchard, Molly Seitz, Annette Swetish, Betsey Fox, and Liz Kroeger.

"At first, I think we were all a little disappointed, but I don't think we could have done much better. Every one did great in the preliminaries, but we just couldn't do it again in the finals," claimed Kitty Flynn, Co-captain, looking back on their 10th place finish. "Considering we only had four returning starters, no real superstars, I don't think anyone expected us—especially the team, to be very good," Flynn replied. "Looking back on the practices, I know they were worth it, but when you have to roll out of bed at 5:30 for morning practices, it's kind of hard to tell yourself that the hard practices will pay off."

But they did.

Boys take 2nd at State GREAT!

The best word to describe the Bettendorf Boys's Swim Team would be "wet," but Junior Kent Voerberg's words seems to be "the best, GREAT."

For the boy's swim team a lot of wishes came true this season. Not every stroke was planned and not every skill was perfected but the things that were accomplished were phenomenal.

"We beat defending State Champions Cedar Rapids Washington for the first time ever, which was great," said Junior Tom Judge.

A few unheard of things:

"We lost to Muscatine in a dual meet and it scared us a little bit going into Districts but a lot of our third string people came through under pressure," said Voerberg. "We even made Fatchett smile at Districts."

They placed second in the state, with Tom Castro being the number one swimmer in the 100 Breast Stroke and taking third in the 200 medley relay, and fifth in the Individual medley relay. The other state participants were: John Affre, Mark Ammeyett, Dan Benson, Jim Robesky, Ricky Kroeger, Brad Fox, Craig Vissar, Jon Hermie, Tom Judge, Kent Voerberg, Ken Arkinson, Chris Beckwith and Barry Stuedemann.

"We qualified a lot more swimmers for state this year which was really good instead of just having a dominating few," said Senior Craig Vissar. "I think this was our best season ever, we had the most team spirit that we ever had," Vissar added. "Also having the leadership of the Seniors was a big advantage," Judge said.

Summing up the season:

"I'm very happy with the performances of myself and my teammates," ended Castro.

Grapplers get 7th at state

"These are the hardest working group of kids we've had, we really got the most out of them," said Varsity head coach Franc Freeman of his wrestlers who finished 7th in state this year. "We had a strong team that could have won state, but injuries plagued our performance," commented Senior Steve Waddel. Senior Kevin Jandt puts it another way. "Even though our team didn't finish as good as we could have, we're still the top team in the state." Coach Freeman, who finished up his 20th year looked upon the season positively. "We weren't supposed to win many meets but we did, keeping our undefeated dual meet record for the third straight year." Senior Craig Wagner felt this was a good year. "The team was so close, it was like one big family." Senior Pat Miletich claimed "We improved a lot."

Wrestling does have its differences from other sports. "You must be in top physical shape," Freeman explained. "It's one on one, you must have a mental attitude of winning, with no doubt in your mind of losing." He went on.

"I'm sorry to see the season come to an end, it went so fast. It's a long wait until next year." Many of the senior wrestlers had been heavily recruited. "Anyone would like to have a B.H.S. wrestler in their lineup," Freeman summed it up, with a broad smile on his face.

Waiting in the wings

The legend lives on. Bettendorf wrestling in the years to come promises to follow in the footsteps of past and present varsity squads. It is apparent in the success and sheer guts exhibited by this year's sophomore and freshman squads.

The freshman under the leadership of Coach Merv Habenicht finished 9-2 despite having the disadvantage of having no wrestlers at heavyweight and 90 lbs. for the majority of the season. "We were short of the numbers," commented Habenicht, "but we as individuals showed great improvement." Added Steve Horak, "I think we wrestled way beyond anyone's expectations, . . . we lacked depth but we still pulled through."

For the second year in a row, wrestlers were undefeated in high school level competition. This impressive group of wrestlers steamrolled their way to a first place finish in the Mississippi eight conference. Depth plagued this team much as their freshman counterparts, but even with a disadvantage at having no heavy weight could not keep this bunch from impressive victories over most comers. The only team that seriously challenged was a Davenport West squad which they defeated 34-33 at West.

"This team always did what it took to win," commented Coach Pausian, "if one wrestler had a bad match, there always seemed to be a teammate who came through with a big win to compensate for the others' performance."

Doing what it takes to win. That's what Bulldog wrestling is all about. This bunch of underdog wrestlers does it as good as anyone.

"With the same attitude of hardwork, desire and perserverance," commented Pausian, "anyone of these wrestlers could go on to become a superior wrestler."

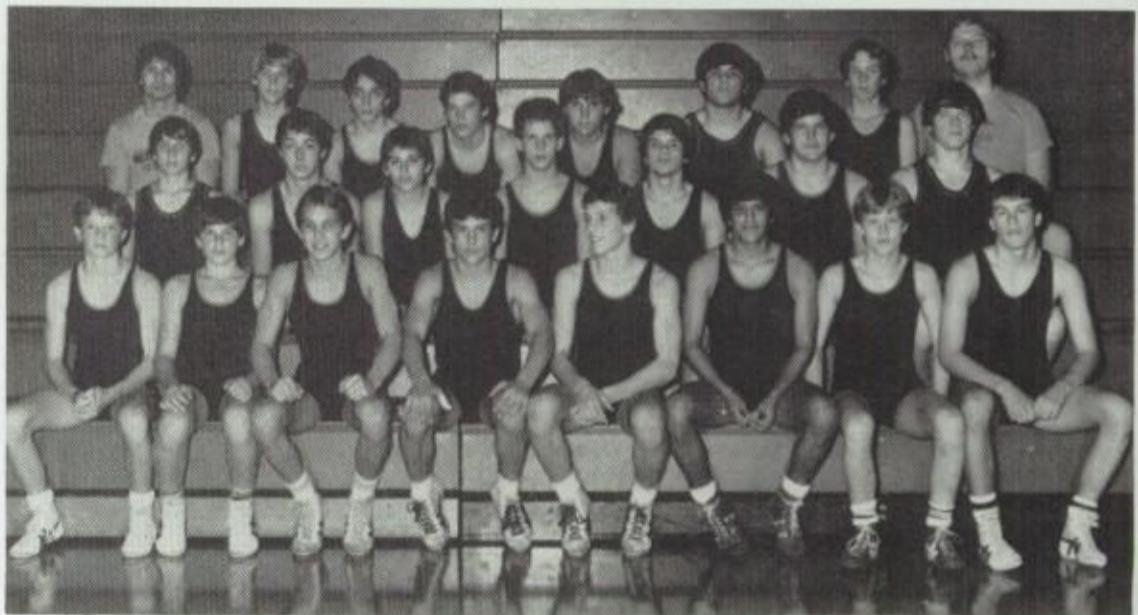

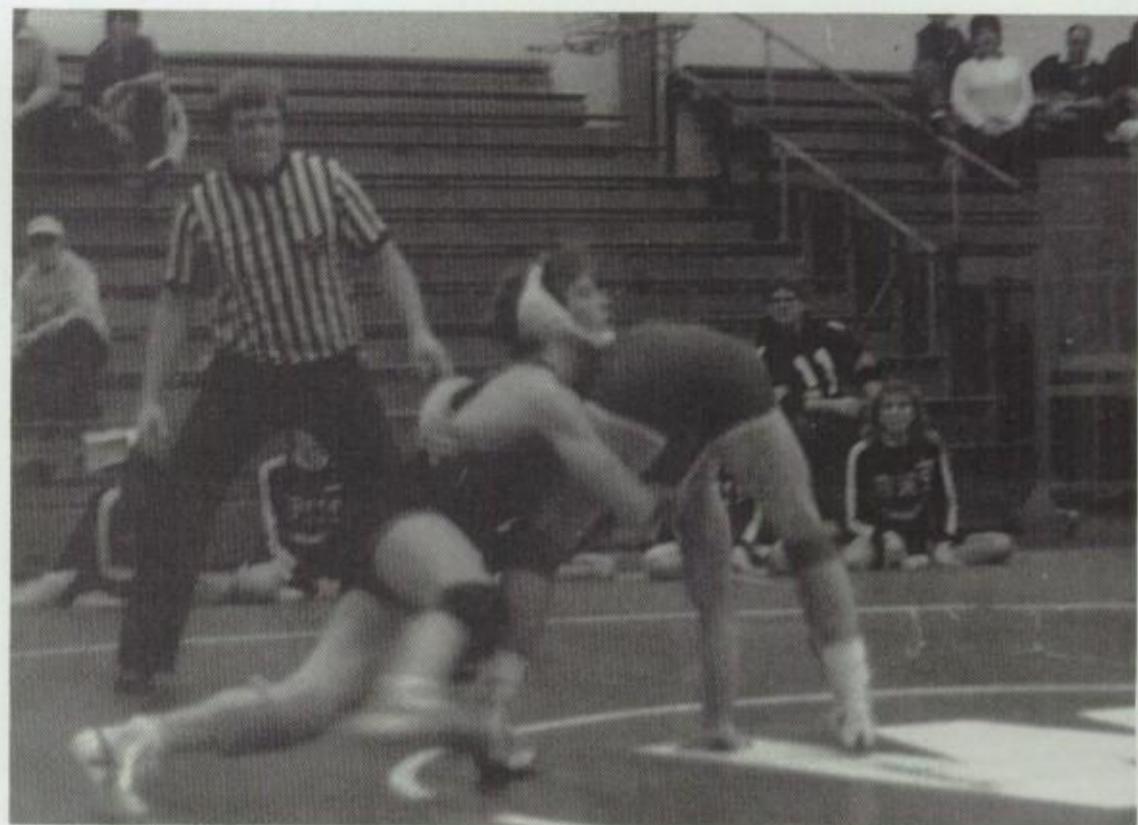

"This group has good work habits and winning attitudes . . . they will be successful," commented Habenicht.

Possibly the most forewarning of all comments is what sophomore John Swisher had to say about his future of and that of his fellow wrestlers, "We'll have a real tough team in the next few years to come because our teams have NEVER lost."

Only time will tell.

Girls make sectional finals!

"Not everyone played to win," commented Senior Lori Marzahn. "At times some of us played to keep from losing." That could tell the tale of this year's varsity girls basketball squad. They finished the season with a very respectable 13-9 overall and an 8-6 conference mark that netted them a three way tie for third place in the Mississippi Eight.

Still, this team was impressive if not awesome at times. Led by high scoring Senior Forward Shelly Smith, the offense shot 52% from the field and 74% from the line. "We were not as aggressive as I would have liked and we didn't rebound with any real consistency," said Altman. "But we were the best shooting team that we've had in four years and we got very good leadership from our seniors this year."

It turned out that the end of the season was the saving grace of this team. They finished strongly in the conference to place third. Entering the Sectionals, this team would have never guessed that they would be playing three games in three nights. Their first was a thrilling 61-60 victory over Muscatine in the final ten seconds. The next night, Central a team that had defeated them only weeks before, came calling. The Dogs' pulled through by defeating the Blue Devils' 63-58 in a very physical game. In the final game, they went to the wire against conference champion Assumption into double overtime, before losing 81-77. Commented Senior Jeannie Mart, "towards the end of the year we got much better, the game against Assumption, in the tournament was our best all around game as a team."

Concluded Altman, "At the end of the year I thought we played well. Had we played with as much emotion and intensity throughout the entire season as we showed in the tournament, we would have been an even more successful club."

Team lacked self-confidence!

For the Boys' Varsity Basketball team, this season was filled with luck or should it be skill?

"We started off the season really well, and gradually began to lack confidence. So the Month of February was a little disappointing for us," said Senior Mark Burns. A lot of injuries caused us a few let downs, but before Districts we began to rebound," he added.

The Varsity Team traveled to Clinton in the first round of District play only to be defeated by the loop champions The River Kings.

"We started off well at the beginning of the season and fell a little bit, but we all played to the best of our ability," said Senior Jamie Runyan.

"I thought the season was a little disappointing considering how good of a start we had. We had a chance to win conference but we blew it," stated Senior Eric Paul.

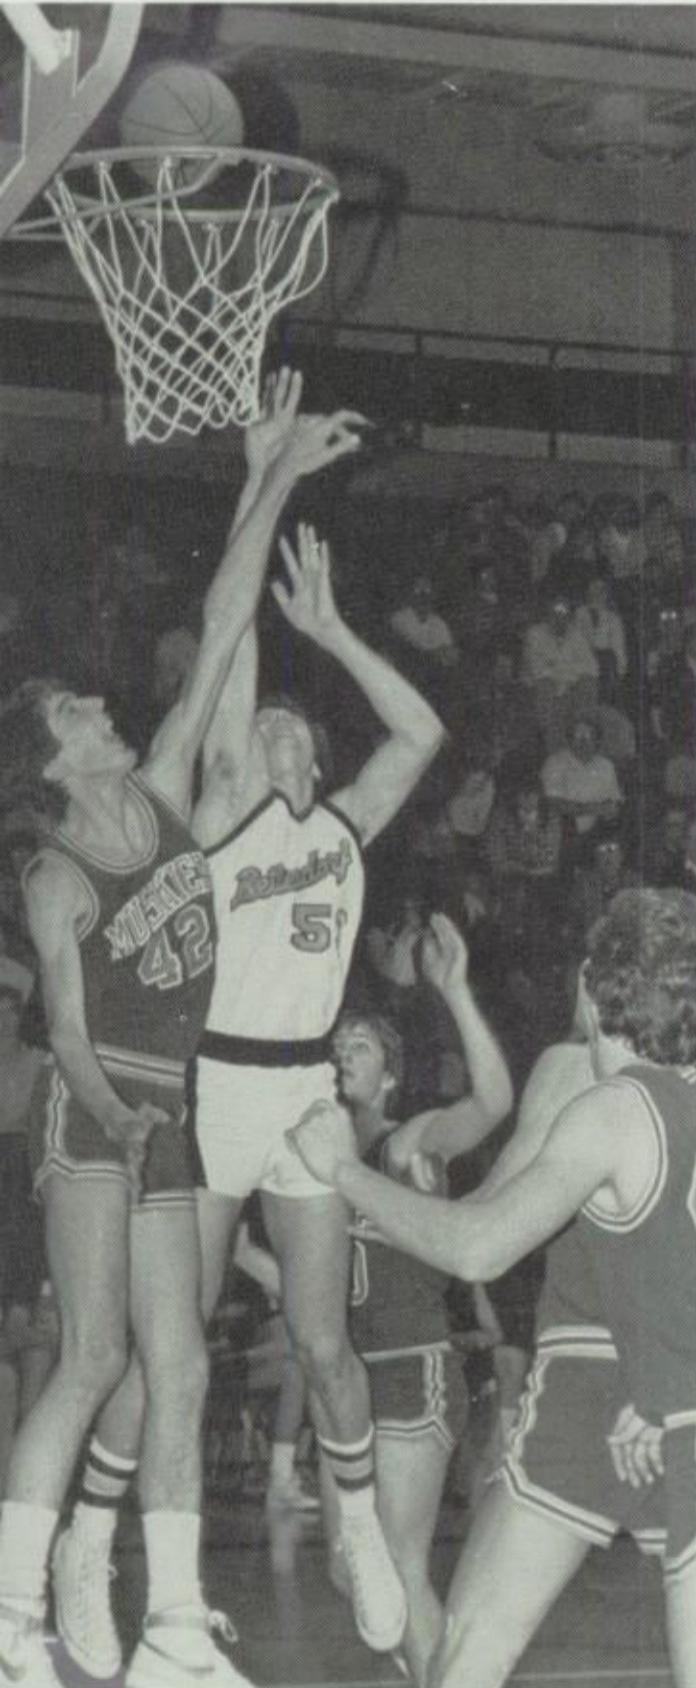

For the players the highlights looked to be the same. "The highlight of the season was the game against Central at Bettendorf and Eric Paul made a dunk at the end of the game," said Runyan.

"I thought it was a good year because we knocked off Central both times," ended Burns.

Outstanding!

"We had a really great year" stated Sophomore Guard John Bowden in talking about the Sophomore boys spectacular 14-4 season, which included an 11-3 Mississippi Eight Conference mark, good for second place only one game behind 12-2 Burlington. "Sure you always like to end up number one, but we played well all season and were very pleased" said Head Coach Don Willadson, who was assisted this season by Jeff Howe.

This seasons squad will be remembered as being good shooters. They shot an impressive 47% from the floor for the year and hit a phenomenal 37 three point shots. "When we played North Scott, out there, we shot 72% from the field for the game!!" recalled Willadson. "I've never had a team shoot like that before." The team averaged 61 points per game, while giving up only 53. The scoring effort was led by Guard Jim Luebke who averaged 15.6 pts. per game, while hitting 27 of the teams three pointers and shooting 52% from the floor.

"We played great as a team, especially in our last game against Clinton," said Forward Joe Springer. "The games we lost were ones that we were not physically or mentally ready for," said Guard Kevin Dau.

But the most important thing for this team was that they gained valuable experience that will prepare them for the level of competition at the varsity level.

Center Steve Hartman, who averaged 11.7 pts. per game, puts the season in proper perspective: "We had a lot of fun this year and that is what matters."

Girls' falter

The 1983-84 season was a disappointing one for the sophomore girls' squad. Finishing 5-12 was not the ideal season for either the coach or the team.

"We learned we have to play as a team to win," explained Tracy Gish, "Our inconsistency in tough game situations cost us a few games."

Liz Dambouradjian commented, "it would've been nice to win more games, considering we had so many losses in close games."

Coach Downs cited the lack of size in the forward court and a poor shooting percentage as two of the major factors that hampered this club.

Still, it wasn't all heartbreak over hoopla. This squad will remember all the fun they had on and off the court. From T.P.ing Mr. Downs' house to dinner parties to some strangely unique warm-up drills before the Burlington game. This team won't go down in the record books, but they proved that the sophomore year is one to enjoy.

"I think the purpose of your sophomore year is to get everybody into the game to get experience," said Jenn Roberson, "we really tried our best and we still had lots of fun."

FROSH. BASKETBALL

Boys' suffer tough season

It was a very tough season indeed for the boy's freshman basketball teams. For example, there was Coach Tom Freeman's Black squad. They won three of fifteen outings, dropping six tough luck games by eight points or less.

"In the close games, the pressure got the best of us," said Tony Rizzuti of the Black squad.

The 4-11 Gold squad, coached by Monte Coy, was more of a radical team. Except for a heartbreaking one point loss to Clinton Black, almost all of their games were one sided. Gold's games ranged from a fourteen point victory over J.B. Young (Davenport), to a twenty-nine point loss at the hands of Iowa City High.

Bur the key for the twenty-two players that made up the two squads was that the season was a learning experience, one in which they learned the ins and outs of high school basketball.

"We worked hard in practice, but when it came to the games, we just couldn't put it together," said Pete Schnyder of Gold squad.

The talent that the class of '87 contains can not be fairly judged until all the players are together on one team. Only the future will be that judge.

Sure, for those twenty-two players, the coaches and parents, it was a long season. But learning does not have to come from winning. Dues must be paid.

Girls' headed in right direction

The freshman girls' squads had fine showings from both teams as Gold went 6-5 and Black settled on a 6-6 mark. Most importantly though, the coaches felt both teams showed immense progress throughout their season. This was evident as Black had a four game winning streak and Gold won four of their last six to conclude their seasons.

"The girls' played well together," commented Coach Kuehl, "and they never gave up during a game." added Black squad Tami Weaver, "Our hard work really paid off toward the end of our season."

Finishing 6-6 was a remarkable achievement for the Black squad who had suffered through a near devastating five game losing streak at mid-season. This club rebounded as their final four games were won by an average of more than 11 points. "In each of those games a different girl was a leader," commented Kuehl, "and we had the opportunity to give all the girls' a chance to play."

On the other side of the ledger stands the consistent Gold squad who finished 6-5. Coach Hirsch commented, "We were very pleased, ... I felt we improved a lot." Both coaches are quick to point out the misconception that to be successful, you must win. "I think at the freshman level we should work on fundamentals, ... winning is nice, but our purpose is to prepare the girls' for the future," said Kuehl.

Next year, the sophomore squad awaits this bunch of freshman. According to Coach Hirsch, the future is bright: "I expect to see this group of girls' to continue their fine competitive attitude, ... I feel they will improve and be successful in the upper grade levels because of their attitude."

PARK BOARD BASKETBALL

Basketball?

There are numerous reasons for participating in Park Board Basketball. There are the rivalries and the parties. The competition and the parties. The thrill of tournament bids and the parties. And then there were the parties. Some teams were out for blood and human sacrifice, while others chose to follow the more lighthearted path.

"We pride ourselves on being the heaviest team in the league," said Tubby's III player Pat McNally. Next in line was certainly their brother team, the S.T.D.'s, who boasted a line-up that bowed the court in the Tubby's-S.T.D game early in the season. On the other hand, other teams chose to distinguish themselves in "lighter weights".

The top teams in the boys' division are among the toughest in the leagues' history. Skilgigs, F.D.I.C and Dream Syndicate lost a combined total of two games, . . . with those coming in competition between themselves. Those wild and crazy girls' were hoop animals at times too. Dominating the girls' league were such crowd pleasing favorites as S.O.S. WWAKA II, Taste Buds, and the Racs.

This years' league will be remembered for it's comraderie and it's creativity. Who will ever forget those "gimic games"? Homecoming, picture night, media night and so on. But beyond the games, there was the intense preparation for ensuing competition. Whether or not it was all legal or not is another matter. Self expression was another big factor in P.B.B. What better excuse was there for teams such as Trojans, Yids, Taste Buds, and All-Mixed Up have to wear those shirts every Wednesday?

GYMNASTICS

Young team takes the floor

What a year for the B.H.S. Gymnastics team. The young, talented team broke the school record for total team points with a top score of 165.50.

The girls placed third in the Mississippi-8 Conference meet, and also in the District meet. There they qualified for the Regional meet where they placed fourth behind top ranked Clinton, Linn-Mar, and Davenport Assumption. The biggest obstacles for the team were Clinton and Assumption, who were ranked first and third in the state throughout most of the season. The two teams were also the only teams the girls lost to in dual meet competition this year. Their dual meet record was 8 wins and 4 losses.

This year's team had a lot of depth and strength in the underclassmen. Only three seniors will be leaving the team, which leaves a lot of talent for the upcoming years. "I think we had a really great year- we surprised a lot of other teams and we also surprised ourselves, commented junior Rhonda Givens.

The Bettendorf gymnasts are moving up to the top of the state rankings and have made a name for themselves.

Indeed they have.

For many students, what goes on after school is an important way of life. The outdoor clubs, music clubs and special interest clubs joined us because we choose to be a part of the organizations we belong to.

Often times, the people we are acquainted with in clubs are the people we enjoy being with most. We share good times on field trips, and even week-long trips to other states and even other countries.

The chance to spend time with other students and meet new people draws people to BHS organizations and gives everyone who participates a valuable learning experience not available in the classroom.

ORGANIZATIONS

Bobby Bulldog — a good Spot . . . I mean, sport

"I like eating hats," declared Senior Darin Brown.

No, there wasn't an epidemic of hat murders at Bettendorf this year. Brown, along with four other students, is Bobby Bulldog, more than just our 'school mascot'.

"You need lots of enthusiasm to keep the crowds and players fired up," commented Junior Lisa Bell who also portrays Bobby. Freshman Kelly Beurner and Sophomore Kirk Woods get to wear the suffocating fur suit during football and basketball games too.

"The kids are great, they like to come up and fight with you," said Bell.

It can be dangerous though, Bell slipped and fell many times and was bruised after every game of football season.

"I slipped at a Central game and hit my tailbone, I couldn't sit down for two weeks," she reflected.

Brown heard about Bobby and decided he wanted to do something like that, he does a lot of "extra things" at Bettendorf.

Bell saw Bobby Bulldog, alias Cheryl Taylor, perform at the state game two years ago and thought it looked like fun. She "jumped at the chance to try out for it."

Bobby Bulldog has been clowning with the crowd for awhile now, having four people do him helps bring dimension to Bobby.

"When I get out on the field or court a lot of tension comes out through Bobby, yelling and screaming and all," said Brown.

"Keeping good relations with the opposing team is important," stated Bell. "I go over to the other cheerleaders to make sure they understand everything I do is as a joke. You have to have good sportsmanship for this."

So at the next game when you see Bobby Bulldog, remember there's one of your fellow classmates inside making Bobby what he is . . . a friend to all, young and old.

"It's hard work, but I like it," Brown summed up.

FCA Cares

Some of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, FCA, swim laps at Middle Pool, some run up and down 14th street, while others just walk from home economics to the math department — proving the focus of FCA isn't athletic ability.

"You don't have to be an athlete," said Mr. Reggie Speak, a health teacher and sponsor of FCA. "All you have to do is come to a meeting and say you'd like to join."

Almost every week at Bettendorf Christian Church the group gathers together to hold their "Huddles" meeting. During the meeting they have a bible study and discuss many different topics.

"It's fun," commented Senior Krista Schoenfelder, with a little smile breaking on her face. "We do lots of fun things and the people in FCA really care about you even if they don't know you that well."

As a Christmas project, the members roamed throughout the snow-filled streets caroling from house to house.

Later, in April they packed their bags with their tennis shoes and headed to Marshall Town for their Spring Retreat. Along with bible studies they played numerous games and participated in their "Olympic".

"In FCA," explained junior Jodi Schroeder, "You meet other people who are Christians."

Members aren't limited to BHS students. Besides the 40 BHS members, it includes adults and students from all over the Quad Cities. This year, for the first time, Central has a FCA group.

"You learn about things other people go through and how they handled it," recalled senior Janella Crittenden. "Then when it happens you'll know how to handle it."

Solid Gold

One of the most relaxing parts of a long hard football practice is the sight of 16 lovely young ladies sharpening up their routines after school in the North parking lot. This year's Goldusters, led by senior, Kris Thorne, and co-captain, Kim Bevard, was one of the best teams to ever come through the high school.

With 15 of the 20 members being seniors, the team had a lot of experience for their halftime performances. "I think they rank up there with the solid Gold Dancers," said Junior Bo Krebs. The fans appreciated the efforts put forth by sponsor, Kathy Van Horne and the Goldusters to liven up football and basketball games, besides "they're fun to look at," said Krebs. Hours of practice, dancing to everything from "Parrot's Theme" to "Eye of the Tiger", were required before the precision drill team performs before the crowd.

"We were all really close" said Senior Caroline Laabs. Placing first in the pom-pom squad competition and third in the dance team competition at the state contest in Des Moines took hard work from all the girls. Individual honors were bestowed upon Tammy Wooren and Kris Thorne in the "Miss Drill Team of Iowa" competition placing third and 10th respectively out of 53 girls entered.

Golduster teams of the future will have quite a legend to live up to after this team of 1983.

Tubas, Tri-toms and Talent

Q.-Who has blue tinted skin, stands in the North Parking lot with instruments stuck to their hands, and are often thought to be moving targets for students parking their cars?

A.-B.H.S. Marching Band members!

If you were within a eight block radius of the high school, you probably heard the B.H.S. Marching Band practicing at 7:30 in the morning during football season. You probably also heard Mr. Mike Green, director of the marching band, yelling at them. Green, who has been directing marching band for five years at Berrendorf, stated that the overall performance of the band this year "was better than last year."

Every year the band marches in the Homecoming and Halloween parade. At this years Halloween parade the unexpected happened to Tom Morgan, percussionist.

"We had just started marching and playing our cadence when the drum head to my tri-tom broke. Since there wasn't any other tri-tom players, I had to ad-lib the rest of the parade," stated Morgan.

The highlight of the marching season was the appearance of the All American Band from Purdue University. The 400 member band played for our Homecoming and amazed the over crowded stadium with their performance.

In early October the B.H.S. Marching Band participated in the Iowa High School Music Association State Marching Band Contest that was held at TouVelle Stadium. Our talented and dedicated band members were of the few who received a superior rating out of the 33 bands that were involved.

Senior Cindy Cerny and Junior Julie Buckley were the drum majors for the band this year. They led the band onto the field and directed some of the music. "Contest was the best part of the season," stated Buckley.

B.H.S. Band spirit and originality was shown in the tuba section this year when junior tuba player Mike Noble designed bell covers for the tubas. "I thought of the idea of bell covers when we went to marching contest. A lot of the other bands had them," commented Noble. Four of the tuba's bells had bulldogs on them and the other two had "B.H.S." on them.

Flag Corp, which was supervised by Mr. Vern Hockett, and consisted of 26 girls, was an important factor in the band. "It's purpose was to add flash and color to the band show," said Hockett.

Although it was a hard season and there were a lot of students involved, Green seemed to handle it well. "This group was hard to work with because of the numbers, but it was gratifying," stated Green.

The "process" of becoming a B.H.S. cheerleader all begins in March. First a bunch of enthusiastic girls try out for a spot on either a freshman, sophomore or varsity squad. After final cuts have been made, a meeting is held to decide where to go to camp, the style of shoes they want, and various other miscellaneous items.

Practice for cheerleading begins in early August for fall cheerleaders to prepare for the Kick-off Night the first week of school. "We really put a lot of work in that I think sometimes goes unnoticed," commented varsity cheerleader Lynn Griffin. Cheerleading involves much more than just being spirited and cheering at sporting events. Since there is no pep-club, the cheerleaders are responsible for decorating the halls, making pep pals, and organizing pep-auds and bonfires. Cheerleading can be very time-consuming, especially around Homecoming.

This year was an all-around good year for head coach Joyce Nussbaum. "I think it was one of the best years for cheerleading since I have been here," commented Nussbaum. This year a new assistant coach joined Nussbaum, Mrs. Patty McGee. "I had a lot of help from an enthusiastic assistant coach," added Nussbaum.

There are a lot of ups and downs about cheerleading, but according to senior Dana Berry, "One of the best things about being a cheerleader is knowing you're helping the team. It makes you realize that all of your time and effort are worth it when you see everyone cheering along with you."

'An All-Staters Triumph' "Mom will never believe it!"

It all starts as soon as the musicians start back to school, the hard work and long hours of practice trying to learn every note and the right way to pronounce every word, hoping that the way they perform will meet the high standards of the judges.

This year 20 hopeful chorus students tried out, but only three were chosen. Out of the 27 talented wind players auditioning, nine made it to the All-State Band and one made it to the Orchestra. Five string players auditioned but only one was selected. As Kim Leopard said, "Even though I didn't make it, all the work was worth it." "We left and headed for the All-State district eliminations, most of us were excited," said Mark Walker.

"As I sat warming up and waiting for the judge, I was starting to get nervous as I sat there picturing the judge as a mean guy, but when he entered the room and started talking to me before I started my audition, he tried to make me feel relaxed and comfortable," said sixth chair clarinetist Jenny Sanders.

Once everyone has gone in front of a judge for the first time, a recall list is posted and some of the nervous and hopeful musicians must go in front of the judge another time.

Finally a list is posted listening the names of those people who made up this years 1983 All-State Band, Orchestra and Chorus. Lisa Bell replied, "When they were posting the names, all I did was pray to God that I made it. It had been a goal of mine since last year, when I didn't make it."

As the musicians read down the list you can hear screams of those who made it and crying of some of those who didn't make it. But as Tom Judge said, "I feel lucky I made it but, even if I wouldn't have made it, I learned a lot from all the long hours of practice."

These people made All-State this year: BAND Liz Gish, clarinet; John Albright, cornet; Theresa O'Hare flute and piccolo; Geoff Wilming, percussion; Carolyn Stahle, tuba; Cindy Watson, clarinet; Ann Pomeroy, Bass clarinet; Robbie Freund, saxophone; Stephanie Green, french horn; Orchestra: Missy Yoder, violin; Kristi Hanzelka, flute. Chorus: Tom Judge tenor, Lisa Bell alto, Kris Wolverton soprano.

-Tom Keys

Junior Chris Wolverton waits with anticipation, for her name to be posted in the All-State Chorus.

Junior John Albright takes a breather along with the other trumpet players in the All-State band.

Choir cuts records, competes in Colorado

"Stop! Somebody sneezed, do it again!"
"Again?! We've done it five times already."
"I'll kill the next person who sneezes." "Ahh-choo!"

So you think choir isn't any fun, well think again! It's probably the hardest class you can take but at the same time the most enjoyable. It does take a special kind of person, however. Not everyone can joke about having to learn eight songs for a Christmas album and seven songs for a fall concert, all within a month. That was what A Capella, the most prominent choir in the school, made up of juniors and seniors had facing them when school started in August.

"When Mrs. Kerelsen announced we were going to record an album," said Senior Emily Shipman, "I first thought Are you serious?"

Mrs. Deb Kerelsen shows her coordination with playing the piano with her left hand, and directing with her right.

A Capella managed to learn their eight songs for the album but recording them at First Congregational Church in Moline was another story. Trying to get 80 members of choir to stand completely still without a cough or a sneeze and sing on cue wasn't an easy task. The album turned out better than everyone expected especially junior Todd Klein. "I couldn't believe it was our choir," he remarked.

A Capella's hard work showed on the album as well as Director Deborah Kerelsen's guidance. With the help of Kerelsen, choir was good enough to have been asked to record the album. They were one of only two choirs in the state to have the honor of recording an album for Delta records. The other choir was Davenport West.

In March, after selling grapefruit and oranges, records and holding a bake sale during the variety show to raise money, the choir made the trip to Colorado to the International Music Festival. The choir also came up with another interesting idea to help raise additional money. Taking a jar from the cafeteria they passed it everyday for any extra change they had, it was a good idea that raised $120 alone.

"This choir wants to be here, they're very well disciplined," commented Kerelsen. "They're better singers than in other years."

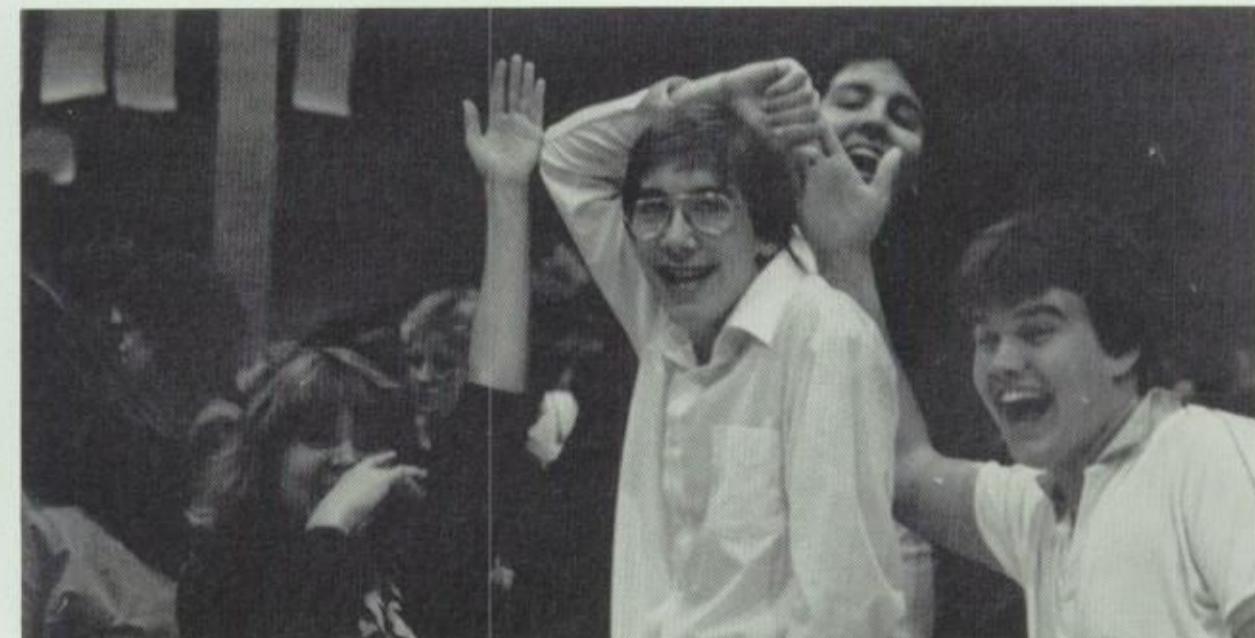

If you like to sing, don't mind some hard work and want to do some exciting things on the side, A Capella might be just the place for you.

Instrumental Music Department shows potential

"There is more potential than any other year that I've been here," said Symphonic Band Director Robert Gish.

This statement proved true, for this year was both a memorable and successful one for the Symphonic Band. The 106-member group performed three formal concerts, participated in both the state large and small group contests, and traveled to Kansas City to compete in the "Festival of Bands" contest. Money for the spring trip to Kansas City was raised by selling pizzas, an annual fund-raiser that was once again successful.

Many of the band members also participated in other musical groups in addition to band. Sixty members of the concert and symphonic bands made up the pep band which played at fourteen home basketball games and twenty-eight members of the two bands played in the orchestra, which met on a weekly basis.

The orchestra, which consisted of twenty-eight string players, also gave three formal concerts and participated in the state large and small group contests. Still in its building phase, the orchestra, also under the direction of Robert Gish, grew in number. Senior Sally Fowler commented, "There were only nine players when I was a freshman. Now the orchestra is much bigger so we can play standard orchestra pieces."

Many orchestra and band members participated in the Tri-City Youth Symphony, an orchestra made up of players from the Quad-Cities area. Ten members of the symphonic band and one member of the orchestra were selected as members of the prestigious All-State Band and Orchestra. Several members of the band were also members of the University of Iowa Honor Band.

The honors, trips, and good memories were all rewards these musicians received for being members of band and orchestra, but they also learned a great deal as well. Junior Amy Myhre summed it up best when she said, "Band helped me to cooperate with others and respect them because of their talents. It also gave me confidence, ambition, and a lot of discipline."

Jazz Band and Limited Edition show their stuff!

The Limited Edition got a new look this year. They shunned their old, out-dated outfits for flashy new ones. The guys now wear black pants and shoes, white shirts, and red bow ties and suspenders. The girls wear black blouses and shoes, white culottes, and red cumbr-bunds. Everyone wears red and white flash gloves. "The outfits this year look much better than the ones from last year," said Junior Lisa McNamara "last years were too flashy."

"Magic-to-do", "Peter Piper Fantasy", and "I Return to Music" were all performed at the variety show. The Limited Edition also had performances at Razz-Ma-Tazz pizza, St. Lukes Hospital, and the First Presbyterian Church. "I think we're better than last year," said director Deb Ketelson "I think we have a better attitude and overall energy."

They also participated in the state contest in January, Coe College contest in Cedar Rapids, and went to Colorado with the A capella Choir. "Being in Limited Edition is great," said Freshman Bruce Grell.

The Jazz Band also performed at the variety show and is the Limited Edition's counterpart in instrumental music. With songs like "Hayburner" and "Make a Joyful Noise" they brought down the house. "We've got a good group this year" said Gish "This is the best trombone section we've had in some time."

The Jazz Band also performed for various other community functions and they went to the state contest in January.

Getting into the Jazz Band isn't easy. You are judged on your sight reading ability, your tone quality, and your desire to be in the Jazz Band. The 21 students in the Jazz Band last year practiced every Tuesday night from seven till eight-thirty. "It's fun and a good experience," said Freshmen Jim McBride, a member, "all the practice pays off."

Freshman Chorus and Choristers Sing Out

The freshman and sophomore choirs may not be the biggest choirs in the school but their sound is tremendous. The sophomore choristers met sixth period every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The Sophomore choir consists of all girls and some of those participate in the Limited Edition, and some even tried out for All State.

The freshman choir consists of all the freshman who tried out for chorus, some even tried out and made it into the honorable Accapella. Some freshman also tried out for All-State. And almost half of the acclaimed Limited Edition consists of freshman.

Concert Band and orchestra set the pace.

"The potential for the Concert Band is the best we've had in recent years," said the band's director Mr. Michael Green.

This year the Concert band performed at 4 concerts, the State Large Group Contest and many of the musicians played in the State Solo and Ensemble Contest, held on March 31.

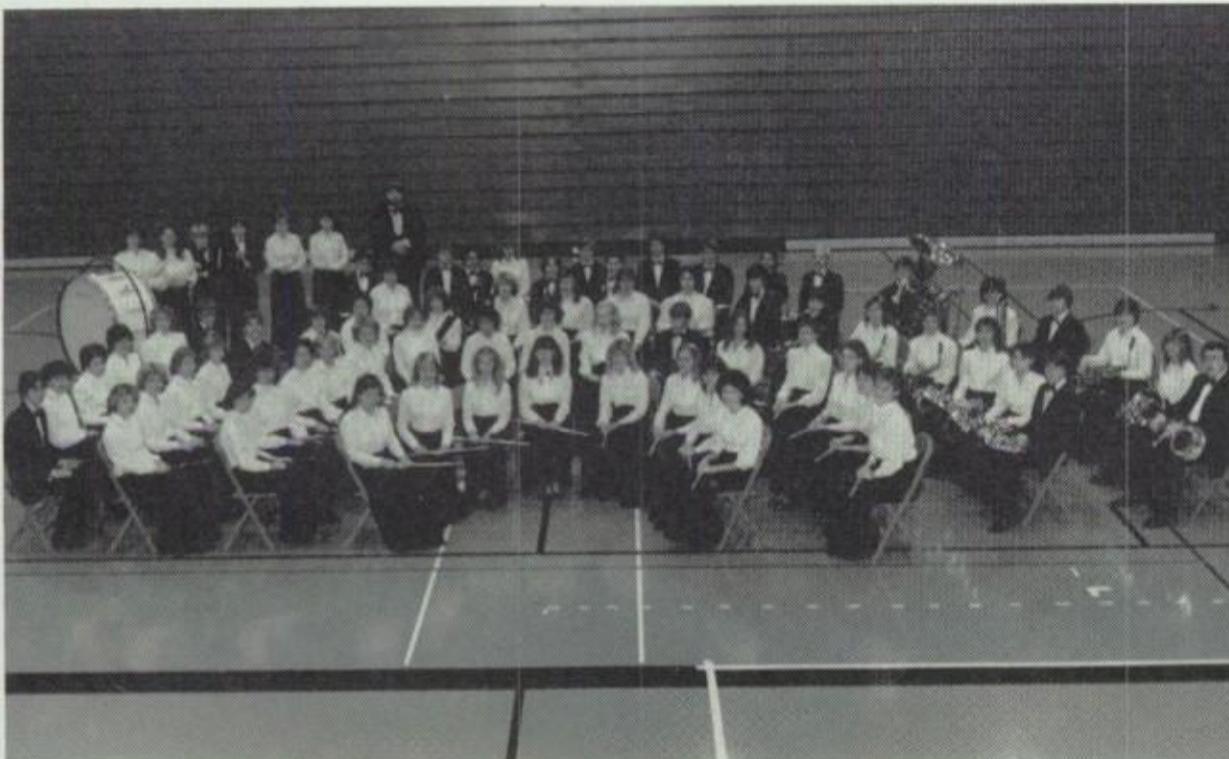

"Concert Band is more like a training band for the Symphonic Band, we get the musicians to tune and get them to read harder literature," explained Green. "Concert band is a good opportunity to further your band achievements," commented Freshman Cam Mepham. 23 strings and 28 winds form the orchestra. The strings get together sixth period, about a month before a concert the entire orchestra gets together to practice before school.

The orchestra gave 5 concerts this year, including The State Large Group Contest.

"This years group has improved a lot. They are continuing to grow, and are playing more difficult music," commented Director Mr. Robert Gish.

Leaders of the Pack

"I think the President and Vice did an excellent job." No, student council representative Myra Crowley isn't speaking of Ronald Reagan and George Bush but, about Bridgett Cassidy and Nancie Derers, student council President and Vice President.

Led by Cassidy and Derers, the dedicated group met three times a week or everyday before important events such as the Homecoming week. They spent hours of their free time, and did more than you could imagine.

The members were elected students. Each class was represented by a president, vice president, treasurer, and a secretary.

Sixth period was the time set aside for their informal meetings and once-a-week parliamentary procedure meetings. They were complete with typed agendas, roll call, and a "don't speak unless spoken to," rule. Added Derers jokingly, "we even got to play around with the gavel."

Parliamentary procedure meetings were used to accomplish things in a somewhat orderly fashion. That is compared to the normal hectic fighting and sounds of, "For the last time, be quiet!", can someone help me hand up all of these posters?!", "in just a minute O.K.?"

This year Nancy McBride has replaced Chuck Nolting as the "ring master." Also known as the student council advisor. "She was a great help," replied Derers. As usual, "Mr. Earp was there when we needed him too." Derers added.

Almost everyone knew that the council's many responsibilities included organizing the informal and formal dances, and the Homecoming parade. But they also planned the Career Awareness Day, The B.H.S. student exchanges, and Spirit Week. The Thanksgiving and Christmas food drives, which Cassidy said were "the best ever", also were part of the council's activities. One change that they made this year, was arranging to have Prom at the elite Blackhawk hotel.

The council's main goal this year according to Cassidy was to, "reach out more to the people, and try to decrease the school's apathy." As junior representative Kellie Vorberg encouraged, "We've had better student participation this year, but we need a lot more to make a difference.

Outdoor Club hears call of the wild

I entered the "Outdoor Club meeting" a little apprehensively. The Outdoor Club, the name brought images of athletic, outdoorsy, fun loving people. I was mostly right, except that these people aren't all great rounded athletes. Oh sure, a few people wore hiking boots and a lot wore ski sweaters, but I found I could fit in being moderately coordinated and friendly with nature. I learned from the kids themselves that the sponsors, avid outdoorsmen themselves, helped them learn to do the activities if they didn't know how or weren't very good.

It would seem as though Mr. Gary Taylor and Mr. Bill Collett, the sponsors, would not have a lot of fun on these trips but Taylor said "The enjoyment I get from the trips is not in participating but in helping the kids have fun."

The meeting started and Taylor explained the trips while Collett wrote out a calendar of coming events adding his own share of ideas. This year the outdoor club went horseback riding, rock climbing, canoeing, skiing (cross country and downhill). Junior Kris Killian, who went on the canoe trip on the Maquoketa River, said "We ended up going backwards more than forward." Yet she still thought it was fun. This year's caving trip proved to be exciting, "if you like lots of mud and no toilets," said Junior Tom Morgan. But he said he would go again next year if he could.

The kids themselves plan the trips, call the places to find out how much it costs, and if they do that successfully they become vice president and that gives them a chance at becoming the president. Like most clubs this one has a treasurer who collects the two dollar dues it costs to join the club.

The meeting ended with some slides of a trip, people passed around pictures and the conversation was lively. I realized that these people made close friends and had many memorable experiences on the trips and meetings they attended. It all looked so fun I decided to join!!

100 Million view "The Day After"

Will the prophecies revealed in the book of Revelation shortly come to pass by way of a nuclear war? Yes, according to the 1983 T.V. movie "The Day After." Shown on ABC last November, the movie had 100 million Americans feeling hopelessly vulnerable to the devastation of a nuclear attack.

After "The Day After" you had to look out your family room window to make sure that everything was still standing. It was only a movie but it had a tremendous impact on most of the people who watched it, and really made you ask yourself "Is this going to happen to us?" Almost needless to say, that question can't be answered with one definite answer or idea.

Juniors Lisa Bregman and Mark Brachreal think that "We can prevent a nuclear war by disarming Russian and U.S. Missiles". Senior Tim Stoltz says "The only way to prevent a nuclear holocaust is to have a treaty with Russia, Sophomore Faith Duncan thinks that "We should keep the NATO peace talks going", Junior Dave Crook said "We can all say a prayer before we go to bed".

But where will we be if we start running out of ways to prevent a nuclear war and someone decides to press the button? We definitely won't be eating contaminated Baby Ruth candy bars while walking on a highway looking for a place to sleep or listening to the president lie to us on the radio about how we can rebuild our great country and replant crops and have everything just fine again.

The truth is that The Day After didn't realistically depict the devastation of a real nuclear war.

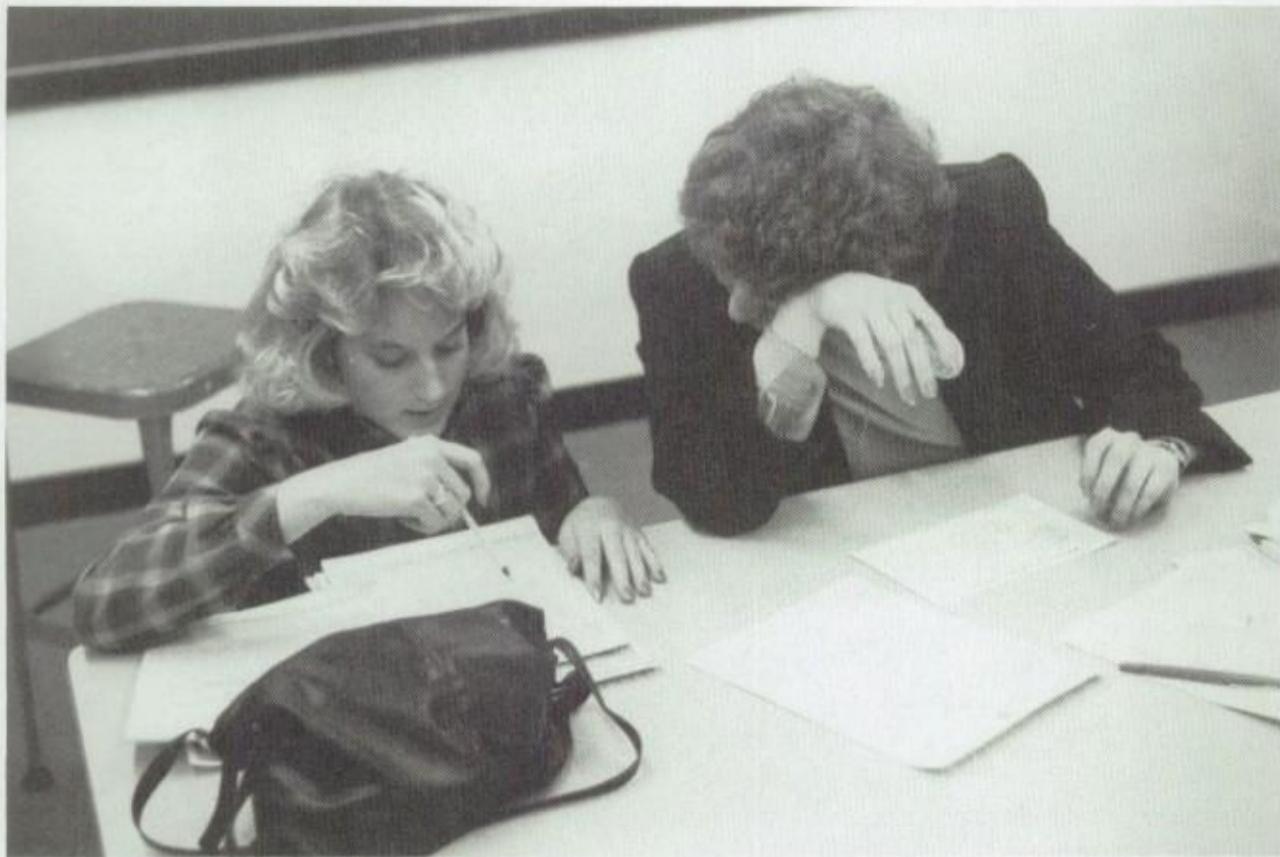

Civilization would be completely wiped out which means that there would be no people around to listen to the president on the radio, let alone any radio towers to transmit signals. There would be no daylight as we know it because the sun would be completely blocked out from the fallout and ashes which also means that instead of moderately warm temperatures like the movie showed we would have extremely cold temperatures.

The movie wasn't perfect in any way but it did force us to come face to face with what could happen to us if we're not a lot more careful in the future.

Is there life outside the Journalism room?

Is there life outside the Journalism room? Some Journalism II students might have told you there wasn't if you had asked them earlier this year. With such a small publications team, this year's Beacon staff had to work extra hours after school, several late nights and even a few weekends and days the rest of the student body had off. The actual "work" starts in the summer with camps and workshops. These workshops allow members of the staff to keep up on the latest "trends in yearbooking."

"It seemed like the deadlines never ended, especially when it came time for our section to be turned in," commented Co-Academics Editor, Dana Berry. Around deadline time J-2 students start to go a little crazy.

"Every year we are faced with students doing their VERY FIRST yearbook ever. When its all over they always talk about what they would do the second time around. I wish they had the chance to do that. The Beacon would benefit from it," commented Adviser Karen Burgus.

"There were times when I felt like giving up but when it was all through I was glad I had a part in putting together my high school yearbook," stated Mindi Ringel, Assistant Editor.

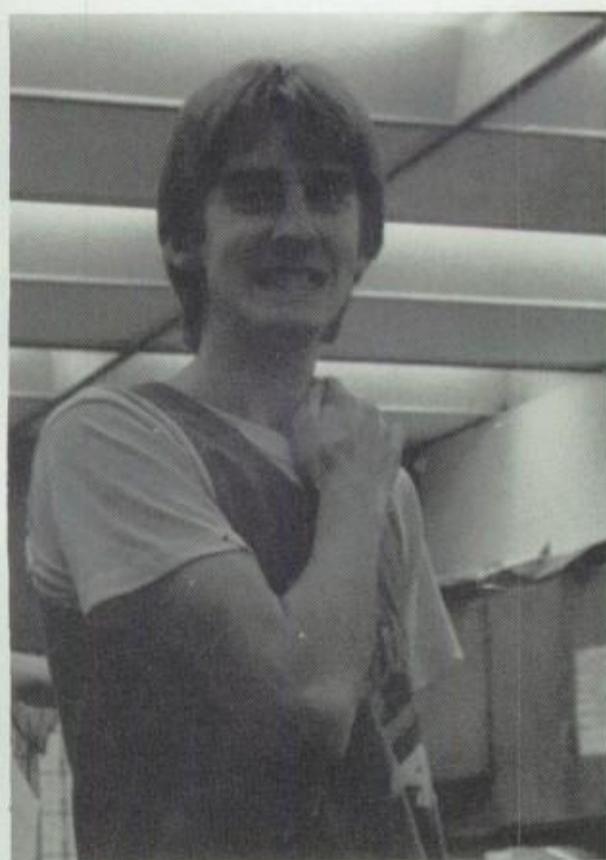

The work is definitely not forgotten altogether, but the pressure is easily put aside when the book arrives and we got a chance to see it in its final form.

"Sometimes we Growled"

"Okay you guys we've got a lot of work to do," cried Miss Karen Burgus, as the Journalism II students filed into the room.

Hidden in the heaps of paperwork, photographs, negatives and grease pencils, there lies a hard working staff. Most people don't understand how much work they really do.

But when you set out to publish something once a month, you're going to have to deal with a lot of pressure and responsibility. Sometimes more than the average human can tolerate. "I've spent more time working with this class than any other class I've taken," said Nancie Derers.

Each person had their own assignments and responsibilities, but when one person messed up, forgot to write a story, forgot to photograph an event, the results can be devastating. It had sort of a domino effect on everybody, setting back each person in a different way.

All these troubles and pains all lead up to one special night of the month-the infamous deadline night.

A time to remember all those things you put off all month. A time to spread joy and happiness with your fellow students by screaming obscenities across the room. One such night was described by news editor Mitch Groth as "a night in living hell."

Then it is time to proofread the paper. Before distributing it, they must all travel to west Davenport and work out all problems before people ever read it. Proof reading is an art itself, "you laugh a lot" said Editor-in-Chief Dana Berry, and try to find mistakes BEFORE 1,500 papers are printed. And then it's time to start a new issue.

Do deadlines ever end?

French Club brings the language of love to Bettendorf

Chicago was the biggest reason that all those people got into the French Club this year.

The club went to Chicago on October 28th. "I love Chicago." It was fascinating," said Marcela Serra a foreign exchange student from Uruguay in an excited voice.

The club went to a French restaurant, Le Bourdeaux, and had fun "listening to the French waiters," according to Kim Gerds.

Melissa Goertsch wanted to "learn about the French culture, and raise money to go to France."

The French Club is not all parties, although it may seem like it. The members have to sell cheese and sausage, to help fund their trip to France this summer, or sometime in their French Club future. Eight of the thirty members went to France the summer of '84.

Twenty-nine German students participated in German Club this year. With the help of President Laura Baumbach, Vice President Jan Carolan, and Secretary-Treasurer Rhonda Sidney, the club had several activities including a candy sale and participation in the German Tri centennial parade in Davenport.

"We have tried to do some things to celebrate the Tricentennial in the club and classes this year," commented teacher Janet Brown-Lowe.

A gingerbread house contest was held December 12th for all German students. Seventeen houses were entered and first and second prizes were given in the categories of most original, most artistic, most traditional, and best use of materials.

Students from Blieskastel, Germany stayed with Bettendorf High German students from early April to May. The visitors, who have had only two years of English attended high school classes and went on an overnight trip.

Hitting the books comes through

I walked into Spanish class assuming this was going to be another day of verbs. After the announcements had been read (none of which I heard), Miss Taylor took out a slip of paper with a list of names. As she approached the end, she read my name.

'What did I forget to turn in?' was my first thought.

She told us we had to see the counselors about something. I can't remember what I was thinking then. Mrs. Fritz and Miss Williamson explained how we could apply to be members of the National Honor Society.

"The juniors must have a 3.5 average," said Williamson. "The seniors must have a 3.2 average the first semester and a 3.0 average the second."

They went on to say that each person must be involved in two school related activities and get two recommendations, one from a teacher.

The qualities they looked for was scholarship, leadership, character, and service. They had accepted 17 seniors and 32 juniors.

"I didn't know anything about the club until about two weeks before the first meeting," said junior K. Kerwin. "I was surprised I became a member."

On Nov. 10, they held the fall initiation. All the new members had to attend the ceremony.

"The fall initiation went really well," committed senior Kelley Ruppert, president of NHS, "The ceremony also went smoothly."

This year the club tried to organize a tutoring program. Many students signed up for the program.

"It's really fun," explained junior Elizabeth Munding, "but we don't do much because we are all so busy."

But countless hours of homework and the participating in many school activities is part of the qualifications for a member of NHS.

Debate Team leaves opponents speechless

"Tonight we must work and improve on our defense. We have a very competitive tournament tomorrow and I want the best effort in tonight's practice. The van leaves after fifth period. Alright now, let's go over the strategy."

Does this sound like a coach preparing his team for competition? Well it is, but probably not the type of team you were thinking of. This is the Debate team, coached by Mr. Paul Lewellan.

According to Lewellan, this year's team consisted of 12 debators, the majority of them freshmen and sophomores. Senior Debator Bruce Miller said this past year was a very consistent one, having a winning record per tournament for the first six tournaments, even though it was a young team.

Debate had a 22 tournament schedule this year, which began in mid-September and ended in March. The team traveled all over the state with tournaments in Ottumwa, Clinton, Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Muscatine, Davenport, and Des Moines, also where the state finals are held. All tournaments are overnight, which usually began on a Friday afternoon until sometime on the following Saturday.

Those trips, according to Miller were "never dull". "Once you get to know Mr. Lewellan, he is really fun to travel with."

Miller is the team's most experienced debator. "Miller is very intelligent and very talented and works hard at it (debate)", stated Lewellan. "He attended a workshop last summer at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C." Miller said this year was better than past years because he now has a better understanding of the entire process of debate.

Georgetown's workshop paid off for Miller because he and sophomore Luanne Meinke made the quarter finals in Extemporaneous Speaking at Des Moines Hoover High School and attended the state tournament in March.

One man can't win the game alone, however. Just as any team, Debate must work together and cannot rely on the effort of just one or two people for success.

"Now squad, the strategy for the tournament is"

Close Up Club asks tough questions

"Wow a week in Washington DC." You could be saying this if you are a member of Close Up club. Every year Close Up goes to our nations capital.

This year nine students from B.H.S. went to Washington. Close Up is in its twelfth year at Bettendorf, according to sponsor Dan Meador.

The whole idea of Close Up is to get high school students to learn more about our way of Government. Over 15,000 students from all over the country attend this event every year. The one week sessions started in October and went until May. Bettendorf students attended from April 1st to April 7th.

This trip cost the students $740.00, including air fair, meals, room, and transportation. This did not include spending money for souvenirs.

The students attended many workshops and seminars, and hoped they'd be lucky enough to see the president!

As we go through our four years of high school there is one thing that joins all of us together while everything around us changes: our classes.

Each year has it's required subjects to take along with new and different electives every year. Studying together, borrowing books and helping each other with homework is all part of the academic experience we all share.

Whether it's geometry, writing lab, modern biology or home economics it all affects our lives in and out of school.

Bettendorf is known for it's academic excellence and we are the one's who make this good name. Through the high membership in National Honor Society and scholarships won each year we show our school is also joined by a desire to be the best.

Co-op Program

CO-OP is a program designed to prepare students for the working world and expose them to a career in trades, industry, health, marketing or office education. The CO-OP advisors Joyce Nussbaum, Darrell Moore and Barb Brown worked hard to build students confidence and teach them leadership qualities.

"It gives you a chance to learn to deal with people," commented DECA participant Lisa Schnoor. DECA, which stands for Marketing and Distributive Education Clubs of America, involves jobs in the field of marketing. "There are three elements of the DECA program, classroom, club and job," said advisor Joyce Nussbaum, "the club serves as a tool to get the classroom members to work together." The club did displays throughout the school and gave a Halloween party for the childrens ward at St. Luke's Hospital along with other various activities throughout the school year.

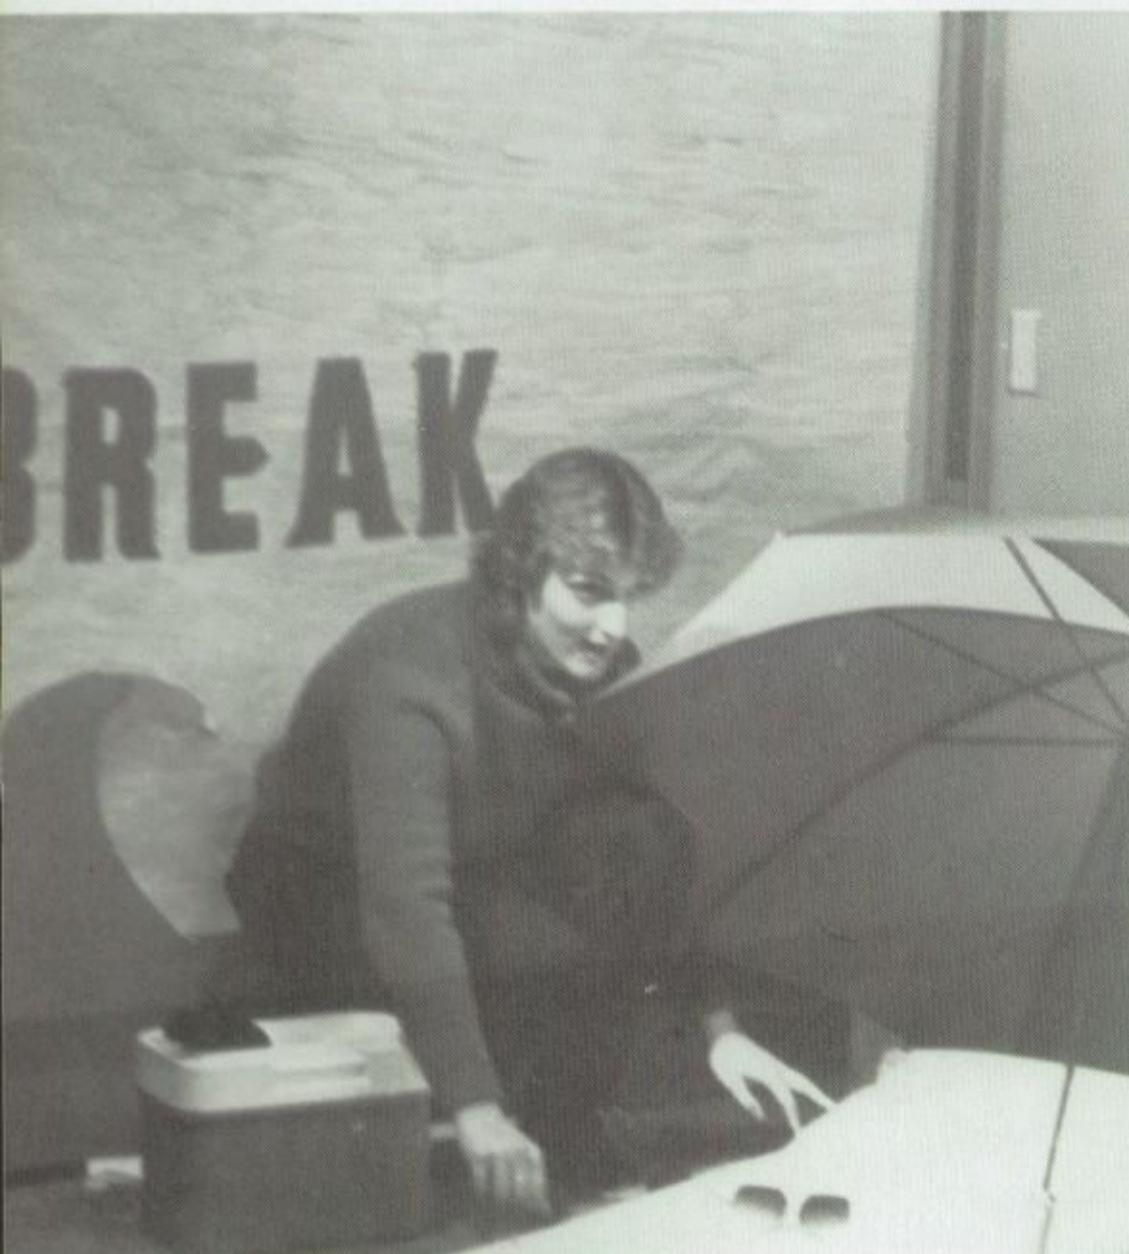

The Vocational and Industrial Clubs of America or VICA, headed by Darrel Moore, deals with trades, industry and health related careers. VICA's purpose is to prepare students for the leadership of work.

The club went to the Delegate Assembly Ames, helped in Jaycees Haunted House, sold candy and went to the John Deere Harvester works. "We watched them make a tractor from just an engine to when they put gas in it and drove it away," said VICA treasurer Traci Moore. "VICA give us a head start over other high school students going into the world of work because being in VICA means you have leadership qualities."

Another CO-OP program Office Education Association or OEA, is the organization of students enrolled in office occupation and is designed to develop leadership abilities. "We practice doing jobs interviews and learn about peoples attitudes, it really helps get us prepared for the business world," said OEA treasurer Jana Keller. Some of the many activities OEA did throughout the year were participating in an employer/parent luncheon for all cooperative groups, attended two regional conferences, decorated Masonic Nursing Home for Thanksgiving and went Christmas caroling at Masonic Nursing Home and St. Luke's Hospital. Mrs. Brown's first year as the OEA Coordinator proved to be very rewarding. "This group is a very special group of gals to me since they are my first class of OE students. I have had most of the girls in other classes and it is rewarding and fun to watch them progress and actually put their skills to use and get involved in other various activities. I enjoy working closely with students and this gives me an ideal opportunity to do this."

Right: For some, classtime provides a time for school work, but for others, a place to relax, as seen in a French class.

Sophomores Chris MacDonald and Jason Gibeault discovered that practicing the art of Spanish conversation helped improve their skills.

Foreign language enrollment rockets

Parlez-vous française?
Se hablo español?
Sprechen Sie Deutsch?
Dicione Latinam?

What class can you take in which you can sing, cook, play games, and get a jump on your college career? Foreign languages of course.

Spanish, French, German and Latin are the four languages offered at Bettendorf High School.

If you're not in a foreign language, is it too late to learn? Students can take a second language any year they would like. However, if you are fortunate, you were able to take your first foreign language in 8th grade at Middle School. This means that some students could have completed five years of a second language by the time they graduate.

"Enrollment has sky-rocketed since last year," exclaimed Spanish teacher Deb Taylor. "There were over 450 students in Spanish class this year.

Job opportunities are much greater for people who do know a second language. As sophomore Scott Lauth put it, "knowing a second language helps you too learn about different cultures." Foreign language resource clerk Lois Fradel adds, "Foreign language helps people to understand that everyone is different." "I like foreign language because I can cuss at my mom and she won't know what I said," replied Junior Lisa Schneider.

"Reading, writing, speaking and listening are the focal points of a second language," French teacher Laura Kauffman stated, "These skills help prepare students for the future."

Creamy icing, plump candies, ice coated figurines and candy coated pretzels are a familiar sight to see during the Christmas holidays. Each year students in German class can make gingerbread houses made out of these ingredients. Prizes are given to the winners of this delicious contest.

An extra special treat could be to go to a foreign country. For example some students will participate in the French trip during June. They will journey to Paris and Strasbourg. Each student will also stay with a French family for one week in Montbeliard. Other languages also offer similar trips, with the exception of Latin.

Yet, why do students take Latin if it is a "dead" language? "Latin helps me to understand English better," replied Junior Sheri Lawson. Lawson has also taken French and Spanish, but she feels Latin has helped her the most.

If you would like increased job opportunities and some interesting thing to do, foreign language is a good way to get them.

Encountering the environment

What is Environmental Encounters? That's a question in many people's minds. This unique semester class is offered only to seniors and this year twenty students participated. This class' activities consisted of several outdoor learning experiences. Most of the first quarter was spent preparing for their six-day backpacking trip to Southeast Missouri. This Mini-trip was to measure the students ability to work together.

October 27th was the big day. The entire Environmental Encounters class, (E.E. for short), met at B.H.S. at 6 a.m. on that dark Thursday morning. The next six days were exciting, grueling, surprising, painful, fun, embarrassing, and memorable.

The majority of the class found the day at the Johnson Shutins to be the most enjoyable day of the trip. As senior Marty Freshwater commented, "We got to the rocks and it was like entering another world."

Upon their return to the classroom, the class began their second major project of the semester. They wrote an outdoor magazine called Ramble On.

"All of the outdoor activities are closely supervised and very safe, but the classroom activity has the biggest risk," said instructor Bill Collett. The students worked on the magazine with minimal help from their teacher.

Julie Berglund said she joined Environmental Encounters because, "I love the outdoors."

Let's Get Physical

As you put on your uniform, you realize that you are getting ready for an important athletic endeavor.

No, you are not dressing for "the" big game or match or meet. You are getting ready for a whole different kind of endeavor, Phys. Ed. class.

Some people are really intense about P.E." said Senior Chris Meador. "The basketball unit was life and death to some of those guys, seriously. I had black and blue marks all over me."

There were a lot of exciting units that the department made available to the students this year. There was a unit that offered cross country skiing in the winter, another offered bowling for the first time.

And of course there were the old stand-by units like volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, weight training and square dancing, just to name a few.

For the Freshmen and Sophomores there was health to contend with, a whole quarter of it.

But there was one important part of the Berrendorf Physical Education department that was missing this year. Grace Smith, a long-time P.E. teacher and coach, who sat out this year after suffering a heart attack over the summer.

The state minimum required 50 minutes of Physical Education per week, a figure that was far exceeded at BHS, where students attended classes daily.

Students who were out for a sport were once again granted "option out" privileges, which meant that P.E. was not required for a student out for a sport.

Sign-up-day was an unforgettable experience for all, but especially for the incoming freshmen, as they were blasted with a chorus of "Off the floor" on the first day.

P.E. is over now, and your attention is focused to the top of your head, where your hair looks like it has been through a wind tunnel, you are also sweaty and uncomfortable, but deep inside you feel good, because you have completed the endeavor.

"Simulators" were a two time a week affair in Drivers Education.

"Put on the red light"

If only I had known the horrors that would be thrust upon me.

I was 15, and happily awaiting that glorious, exciting and beautiful day in January, when I would turn 16!?* WOW!

I would finally be able to drive all over the world by myself without my mother sitting next to me screaming, "Look Out!", "You're going too fast!", "You almost hit that bicycle!", or "Red Light!".

School was to begin in a few days and I was dreading the thought of returning.

I was looking forward to getting Drivers Education out of the way; however, I didn't think it would be too difficult and brain racking since there wasn't much to the idea of driving other than steering and turning. (Little did I know).

When school began, I had the class first hour making it nearly impossible to finish out the day and inspiring thoughts of suicide.

The teacher informed us immediately that we would have three major requirements in which we were subjected to tortures beyond human understanding, like being in a class room 5 days a week, driving a real car one day a week, and a 2-day-a-week unreasonable exercise to be called simulators.

The one day assigned for driving was self explanatory as to why it was done once a week. The idea was to give the student a real encounter with the road. You were required to have an Iowa Learners Permit in your, by now, sweaty little hand. This would be closely inspected by the drill sergeant prior to driving. If by some forsaken reason you were to forget the permit, the teacher would look at you as if you had just killed his mother and ever so graciously inform you that you would receive an F for that day. However, if you weren't so lucky you would get in, buckle up, fix the mirrors, adjust the seat, check hand position and then start the machine.

Now you are expected to have hands at the correct positions, know where all cars are, use turn signals, watch the road, watch the speedometer and listen to the sergeant yell at you for the last thing you did wrong, all at once. This was an experience dreaded by all.

The simulators were designed to resemble an electric chair. They were a non-mobile chair, which is suppose to simulate a drivers position in a car. You are forced to buckle yourself in and fix a mirror on the left side of the car so that it points to a screen at the front of the room.

A movie taken from the drivers seat of a car is shown. You are to imitate the cars' movements for simulator. If you by some chance made an incorrect move, an electronic board at the back of the room would light up telling the teacher you screwed up. To my memory few people ever got much better than 60% correct on a single movie.

The final requirement you would be unjustly put through, was a classroom. In this you would be informed and drilled upon the dangers and problems that you could encounter while on the road. You are shown countless films and an occasional lecture. These films aren't fit to be shown in any classroom, as they entail numbers of gruesome scenes that are half the reason I never ate lunch.

I pity anyone who must endure this ordeal.

Therefore, I pity all.

Home Ec. teaches motherhood; independence

You are finally out in your own. Isn't it great? Mom isn't there to help you anymore. Oh no! Why are your clothes two sizes smaller than the size you wore before? Does a Big Mac Pac sound like the nutritional meal?

Simple skills such as mending and washing clothes, buying nutritional food, and learning how to live on a budget are of few of the things taught in the home economics department. "Every student, whether they go to college or not, needs to know basic skills like eating nutritiously," stated Marta Brooks, Home Economics teacher.

Such skills can be learned in Basic Foods, Independent Living, and Family Living courses. Independent Living is offered to seniors that haven't had any Home Ec. In this class nine weeks of food and nine weeks of clothing are taught.

Don't ever believe the misconception that Home Ec is only for girls. In all of the Home Ec courses, 25% are boys and it's rapidly growing. "I thought it would be fun to sew clothes," stated Senior Tim Diamond. Dorothy Paulson, Team Leader of the Home Ec department, said it bugged her when people said Home Ec is for the slower learners. "We have a lot of good things to offer," she stated.

Some of the students in Home Ec courses liked to play practical jokes, such as grinding silverware in the garbage disposal and burning the food. Of course burning the food could have been an accident. Senior Karla Huffman had an accident in her Independent Living class when she tried to make a pair of pants. "I sewed the back of the pants to the front of the pants. There was no way I could get into them," she exclaimed.

Not only are there basic food and clothing courses, but also Interior Decorating and Gourmet Foods. Guest speakers from furniture and clothing stores came to speak to the students, they also had the chance to visit condominiums.

In Child Development, a class taught by Miriam Killinger, the students learned how to plan and raise a family. "You have to learn to be able to cope with problems, make decisions, and how to cope with children," stated Marta Brooks.

Maybe sewing a button or washing clothes is no big thing to you now, but it will be when you are out on your own. Home Ec could be the course for you. "Having a knowledge in the courses we have to offer is going to help a student in day to day living," stated Paulson.

Senior Lisa Hulting plays "mother" in Child Development.

Below No, this animal is not real it is the work of an art student.

Art develops ability, not just talent

"We're opposed to the idea of talent" because it implies that you're born with it. We feel this ability in art can be developed." Such is the philosophy of Rick Shuster, one of the two art teachers. This year, art classes have been changed from last year's Art 1, 2 3, and 4, into a series of specialized courses to develop "an individual's ability."

Prospective art students have a choice of Art I, Drawing and Painting I, Advanced Drawing and Painting, Commercial Design, and Advanced Individual Projects in Art.

Art I is a general exploratory course that all types of media from pencil drawing to watercolor. One of the highlights of the year for some students was the pop art, such as the giant pencil hanging in the I and I area.

Drawing and Painting I is for the student who already has a general background and who is willing to explore new techniques and mediums. (No this does not include finger painting.)

Advanced Drawing and Painting is for the student who would like to take a more advanced look serious approach to techniques.

Commercial Design, the newest idea in art classes this year, is for the student who is interested in learning how to design advertisements, packaging and other visual aids such as posters, book covers, album covers and magazine covers. Who could forget the made up face of Boy George, as we passed through the English area, done by Angie O'Donnell, a Commercial Design student.

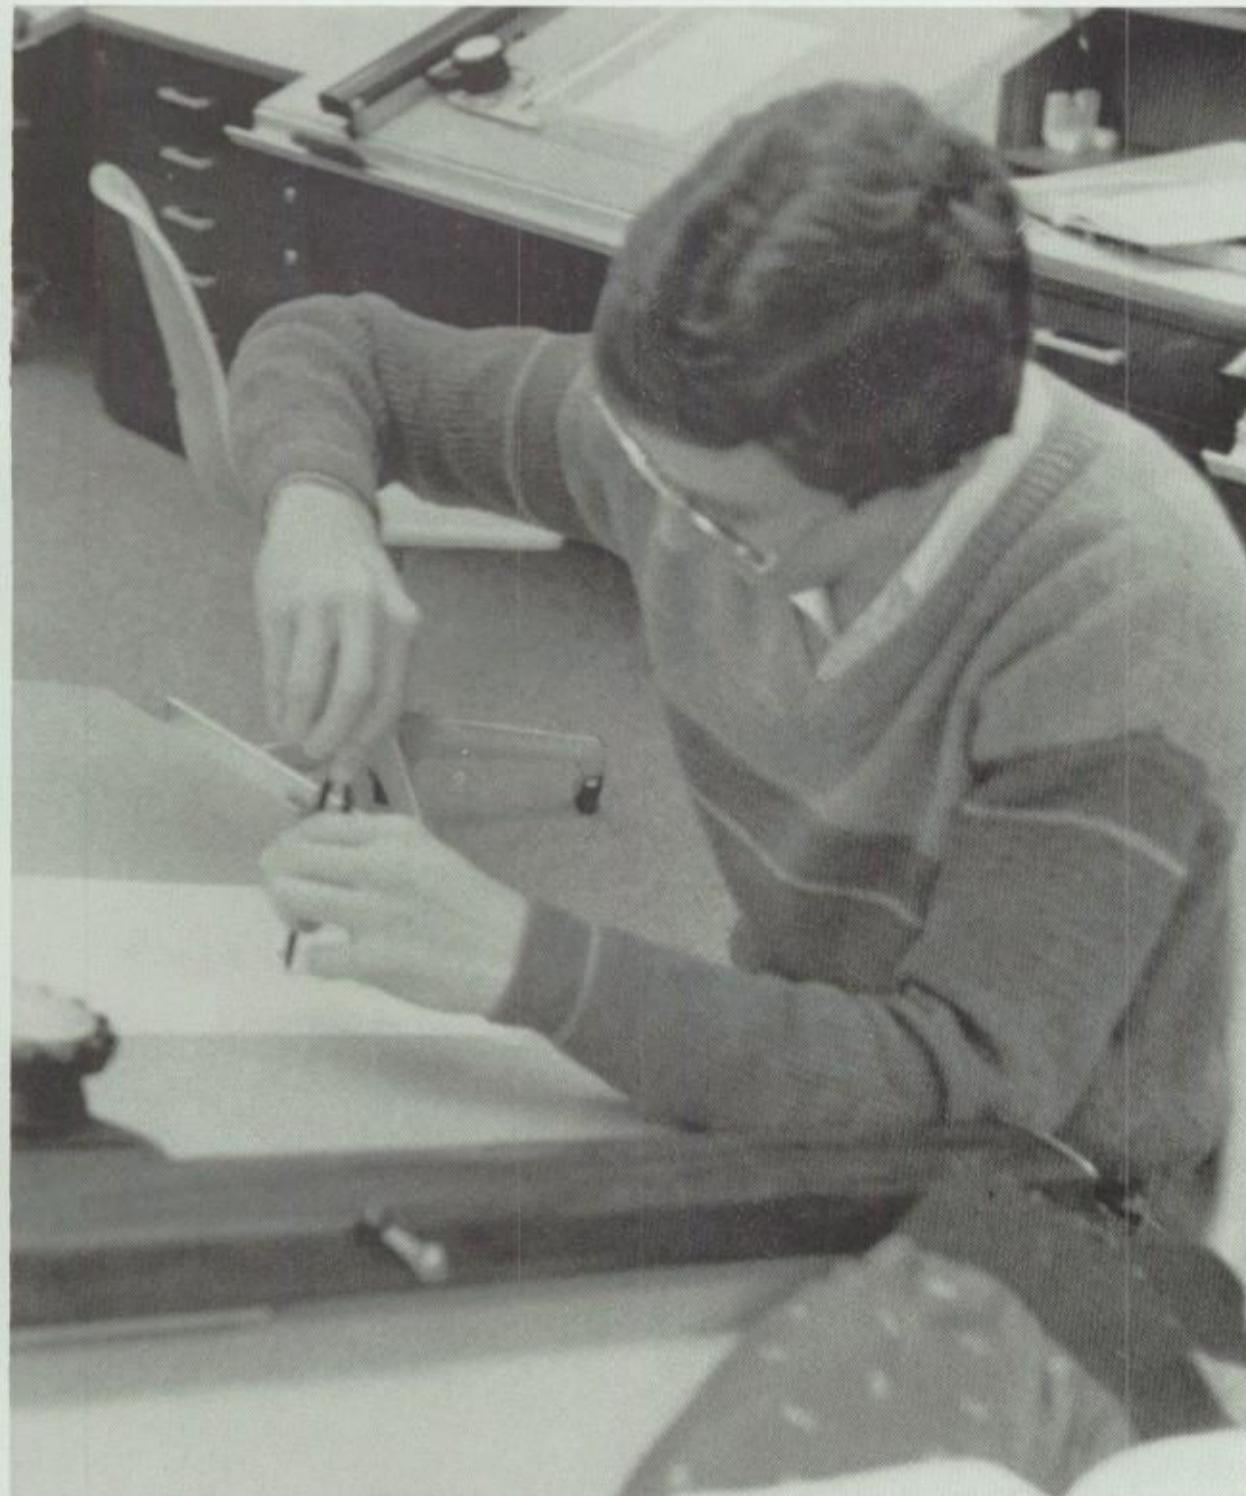

Advanced Individual Projects In Art is for the student who would like to be "on his own." The student makes out his own contract with different kinds of art he'd like to do, and must complete all of it within a nine weeks time period. In this class you could finger paint if you wanted.

There's a different class for just about everyone. "Art caters to almost any personality," says Art teacher LeAnn Erickson. "Everybody needs a creative outlet."

As for the students themselves, most were glad they got into art. "It's fun to create your own ideas and put them down on paper," said Jon Mann, Advanced Individual Projects Student. "You can come here and create, be crazy and do bizarre paintings with secret meanings. It's fun, everyone should try it."

Industrial Arts broadens minds

"Get those safety glasses on!" For crying-out-loud, you can lose an eye without those things."

A lot of us senior guys had heard that for three or four years.

"Get those glasses on or I'll write you up," Mr. Evans, the auto shop teacher would say.

There were even lines on the floor designating the border for wearing safety glasses.

But, I guess they were right. The teachers were only thinking of our safety. But they could have made safety glasses better looking.

The industrial area was really great. You could work on your car, or just work on one of the cars donated to the school. You had the opportunity to learn how to weld, or be a machinist. The industrial area also offered you the education of working on small engines, or working with wood.

The class for the pupil who didn't want to get his hands a little dirty would have been one of the many drafting courses offered.

A mixture between an art class, photography and drawing classes, were Mr. Wellerding's graphics arts courses. There you learned to design a layout and print up posters, notepads, and even T-shirts.

Those who never took an industrial arts course really don't know what they missed.

The opportunity to broaden the mind in a field of the industrialized world. To learn mind-brain coordination instead of the same ol' stuff . . . math, science, English, and history. The chance to work on something by yourself.

The B.H.S. Industrial arts area gave you the knowledge of many skills that are useful later in life. It is always good to have some sort of experience, and what better place could you get the experience than the B.H.S. industrial arts area?

TAG program grew to 57

Talented and Gifted, otherwise known as the Autonomous Learner. Is that what you thought TAG was? Most students didn't know what TAG was, but it was important that they did.

There were 57 students in the TAG program. The program was scheduled into a regular class, in which students earned credits. The classes met regularly during the week, in small groups, which were chosen by the students along with the topics they concentrated on.

To get into the program the student must have been recommended or nominated by a teacher or parent. The students could nominate themselves if they felt they were Talented and Gifted, but tests were required. The students were identified on the basis of their academic achievement, such as creativity, learning motivation, and the desire to do independent work.

The program has only been at Berrendorf High School for three years. Linda Bess, the teacher of TAG, has been with the program for two years. "The program is still developing to meet the needs of the people who are in it," said Bess.

The students are constantly involved in making courses for other classes, they also teach the class what they have researched. Each person chose what subject they want to research, anywhere from computer programs to writing novels. Robbi Freund has written two novels, one called Summer of The Bar Girl and the other is called Stage Struck. The subjects also range from selling computer programs to large companies through extensive reports and research studies on things like the outlook for world peace and prosperity, recent medical breakthroughs, and even sexual revolution of the 80's.

Seminar presentations were given by groups of students. Paul Elkin and Dave Geifman gave a seminar of Nuclear War called "Model U.N. program" and are representing Egypt. "We have to act the part of the country", Geifman said. Dave Balluff and Shea Doyle also did a seminar. Theirs was on Education and was called "Education: A Need For Change?" Balluff said "Hopefully the outcome will be something we feel we need." Each group taught what they researched, such as computeronics, nuclear disarmament, foreign customs, exchange systems, automated offices of the future and genetic engineering. They ended the year with an individual project of their own choice and did an in-depth study of what they chose.

The people of the community with passion areas come in and share their knowledge (surgeons, Photographers, etc.)

Bess says that the group realized that it's ok to be different than other people, and to be your own person. "It gives the student the opportunity to pursue their talent and do what they are capable of doing.

"Students need learning opportunities today to become leaders of tomorrow."

Mrs. Polly Ven Horst helps our a student. There were 90 students in Special Education this year.

Individualized studying was encouraged in Special Education.

BHS Special Education: The Best Around

"I feel Berrendorf High School has one of the best Special Education Departments around, also the teachers are great because they're so open," stated the new B. D. teacher, Kathy VanHorn.

There are several reasons for the existence of the program such as helping with studies, socialization, and developing a sense of responsibility.

"Our goal is to help kids through classes, graduation, and job placement," said Martha Lyle.

There are nine teachers and close to 90 students in Special Ed., Reading, Math, Writing lab, English, American Govt., World History, American History, and classes such as Personal Development Lab, are taught by the teachers.

"Some classes are individualized while others are team taught," says Bonnie Fisher.

Many students attend Auto Shop such as Steve Wells and enjoy this part of the day most. Others have busy schedules being involved in outside activities like Laura Kane in track or other sports.

In a Social Interaction class taught by Patti McGee, and VanHorn, "the students work to improve socialization skills," states McGee. They take field trips to Scott County Park, Putnam Museum, out on the town to Happy Joe's, and a possible ski weekend coming up. The math department goes bowling as a learning experience on how to keep score. "It's very rewarding," says Fisher, "Just to help the student through high school and see them graduate prepared for the world."

Mary Bernhard explains that as juniors and seniors the students are required to get jobs. "Mark Weddum, special ed teacher, is in charge of this and helps the student get a job within the school or bus barn or out in the community," said Bernhard. According to Fisher, "The plus for the students is great here at B.H.S. Ames has commented on the superb program, and the teachers really care about getting the most out of the students."

Although some students only have one class in the program, McGee says, "You get to know the students really well since you have most of them twice a day."

VanHorn commented, "I enjoy working the Special Ed. program because the kids are unique and it's more individualized." Fisher concluded, "There is a wide variety of possibilities for the future from college to technical school, the service or employment depending upon the individual."

The English experience: fire drills to Romeo and Juliet

Language (lang'gwij) 1. Human speech spoken or written. 2. speech of one nation or race. 3. form, style, or kind of language. 4. wording; words: 5. any means of expressing thoughts or feelings.

That is how Language is defined in the dictionary, but is this how language is taken at B.H.S.? Not necessarily, I surveyed some different classes and found out what language Arts really means to us and what we will remember most about it.

In your freshman year there was vocabulary and spelling and vocabulary and spelling and then there was vocabulary and spelling. It felt like at the end of your freshman year you could spell any word and also define it. But in English nine "Romeo and Juliet" was also covered.

Besides the academic subjects covered in English nine, many freshmen will also remember their teachers and things that they did. Some freshmen will remember Mr. Downs and the one day that he didn't chew gum.

But the freshmen English experience doesn't prepare a student for what is about to happen to them when they reach that famed sophomore year of English, "The Slump."

"The Slump" starts out like English nine with vocabulary and spelling but then comes the big project, the TERM PAPER! The term paper in itself is not that bad, it is all the time spent on it, such as late nights at the library or writing out all those little white note cards. The worst part from the term paper was the speech for one particular sophomore it seems that when he got up to give his speech he forgot what he had to say.

After your exciting sophomore year with your term paper and reading books such as, "To Kill a Mockingbird," believe it or not English does get better.

Even though only two classes are required for your junior year they are a semester long. For one whole semester books are read in literature classes such as Contemporary Literature and American Heritage, and the next semester is all writing in classes such as Writing Lab or Creative Writing, or Journalism I (which is a year course).

Having Mr. Lewellan for a writing teacher could prove to be an experience, one student said, "When Mr. Lewellan told us that for fire drills to go the proper way, in case of a real fire, it's every person for his/her self."

But I guess that Literature classes have their moments too. One student told me this, "remember we went to English Heritage Class and no teacher came in. We waited and we remembered the 10 minute rule. (If a teacher doesn't show after 10 minutes you can leave). It was 11 minutes after and one brave soul left and the rest of us followed. We found out later there was no minute rule."

After surveying all those students this was my favorite comment. "I don't have a memorable experience from English because English isn't anything I want to remember."

Gaining practical experience

"Business classes are very important for students because most of the jobs in the future are in the business area and these practical courses contain information with which all students will be faced with some day," said Mrs. Barb Brown of the Business Department.

One of the most important places in this building is the business department. For most students, taking a business course can mean valuable, practical experience in fields such as secretarial work, accounting and other related jobs.

"I took accounting because I thought it would help me in my future business life," said Senior Tony Duncan.

Said Eric Spearman, a senior, "I am interested in business as a career and the curriculum here turned out to be very interesting . . . I believe I will be much better prepared."

Many students enroll in a business class to get a jump on their college work, although no specific college credit can be gained. Mrs. Brown points out that the experience gained here may save time later in college because of toiling in beginner classes, an experienced student could move into intermediate or upper-level courses.

Beyond the fact that a business class preparing you for college or the business world, it also helps prepare an individual for life. As Paustian stated, "The purpose of these classes is for the preparation of the individual in the skills, concepts, and understandings that are required for everyday living.

(Above) "Intensity" was the word in typing class, as students try for an error free paper.

"A large share of the student population will ultimately work in the business world," explained Mr. Terry Pausian, an accounting and Data Processing teacher. "I think all students should participate in those fundamental experiences and learnings which are concerned with the operation of our business system."

Is it math --- or is it Greek?

Confused students; helpful teachers and cluttered chalkboards are not an uncommon sight in the math department. Every test seems to be developed by Einstein and written in Greek. "It's difficult for students to accept struggling as part of the nature of learning mathematics," reasoned Miss Joann Stuhr.

Algebra is the starting point for ambitious students seeking a good education in math. Mr. Monte Coy pointed out that word problems were the hardest thing for the students to understand.

If you haven't had your fill of colored dividers and graffiti filled desktops then Geometry is next. Buy your Geometer early and get ready for a year of proofs. Mr. Jeff Howe added that it's hard for students to accept "the fact that in Geometry you have to learn more than one concept a day."

Advanced Algebra is the next step up the ladder of difficult but rewarding math courses. Sharpened pencils and complete attentiveness are two must's for this class that averages between a half hour and an hour's worth of homework a night. Mr. Gary Taylor commented that logarithms seemed to be the thing that gave students the most trouble.

Buckle your seatbelts. You are about to enter a new dimension in the world of mathematics. Math Analysis is tough but by no means impossible. "It's difficult for students to reason and analyze and instead they would much rather memorize," Stuhr explained. She also said that students complain about tough, lengthy tests and grades. Junior Jeff Scott remarked, "The hardest part of Math Analysis is getting your test back and looking at the grade."

If a student is fortunate enough to finish all these classes and still have a year left, then you have option of taking higher math. A. P. Calculus will be offered next year instead of advanced math.

The fastest growing Math course was Computer programming, taught this year by Mrs. Marica Eckdahl and Miss Brenda Walker.

"Computer Programming was really tough, but it will help in the long run," said Senior Chris Meador.

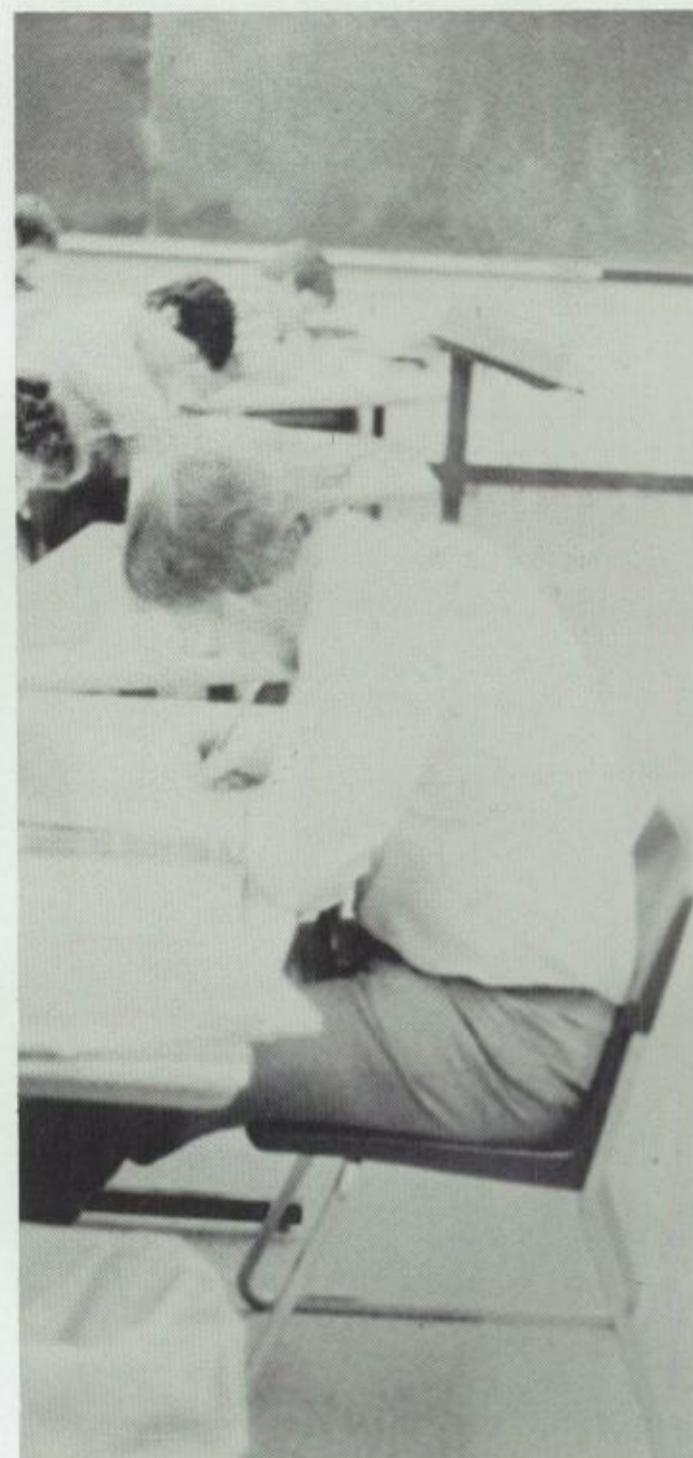

"It was a great course for learning the fundamentals of computers" said Senior Ken Kaiser. "You hate it when you are in there, but when you get out you are glad you took it."

After struggling through four years just to earn a respectable grade you are off to a whole new world. It's called college. Miss Stuhr added encouragement when she said that the things students complain about in high school are the things they are thankful for in college.

Students blinded by science

Mr. Gorsche uses beakers in a class demonstration.

What area of the school has slimy worms and feral pigs, a stench you can detect as soon as you get to the third floor, and has more doctors than any hospital in Bettendorf?

If you haven't guessed yet, then you must have flunked Biology. Yes, it's the Science Department.

This department offers Biology, Chemistry, Physics, Advanced Biology, and Advanced Science for students at all learning levels. To graduate from Bettendorf High School, a student must have taken Biology. Students who are considering college should have two to three years of science.

The Science Department has not made any course changes from last year, but it is always a thought for the years to come. "In the future we would like to offer an astronomy and geology class," stated Jim McGowen, team leader of the Science Department.

Something that has been changing from year to year is the use of computers in science courses. Science teacher Don Schaefer feels students must use computers because of the growing use of computers in the business world today. "The kids have to learn some programming in Advanced Science. They write programs to help them understand better," commented Schaefer. Computers are used at one time or another in all the courses, but it's mostly used in Physics, Advanced Science, and Advanced Biology.

Physics students had a chance to toy around with slinkys this year, but it was serious play. Using the slinkys helped the students learn about waves. Mirrors and ripple tanks were also used to help explain about light and waves.

Some of the science teachers gave their students a surprise before Christmas vacation. The students thought they had to do an ordinary experiment when they walked into their room. They did some of the normal procedures- mixing, heating, cooling, and pouring, but when the mixture cooled and hardened, the students had peanut brittle to munch on. "I was really surprised. It was a lot of fun!" stated Junior Suzanne McBride.

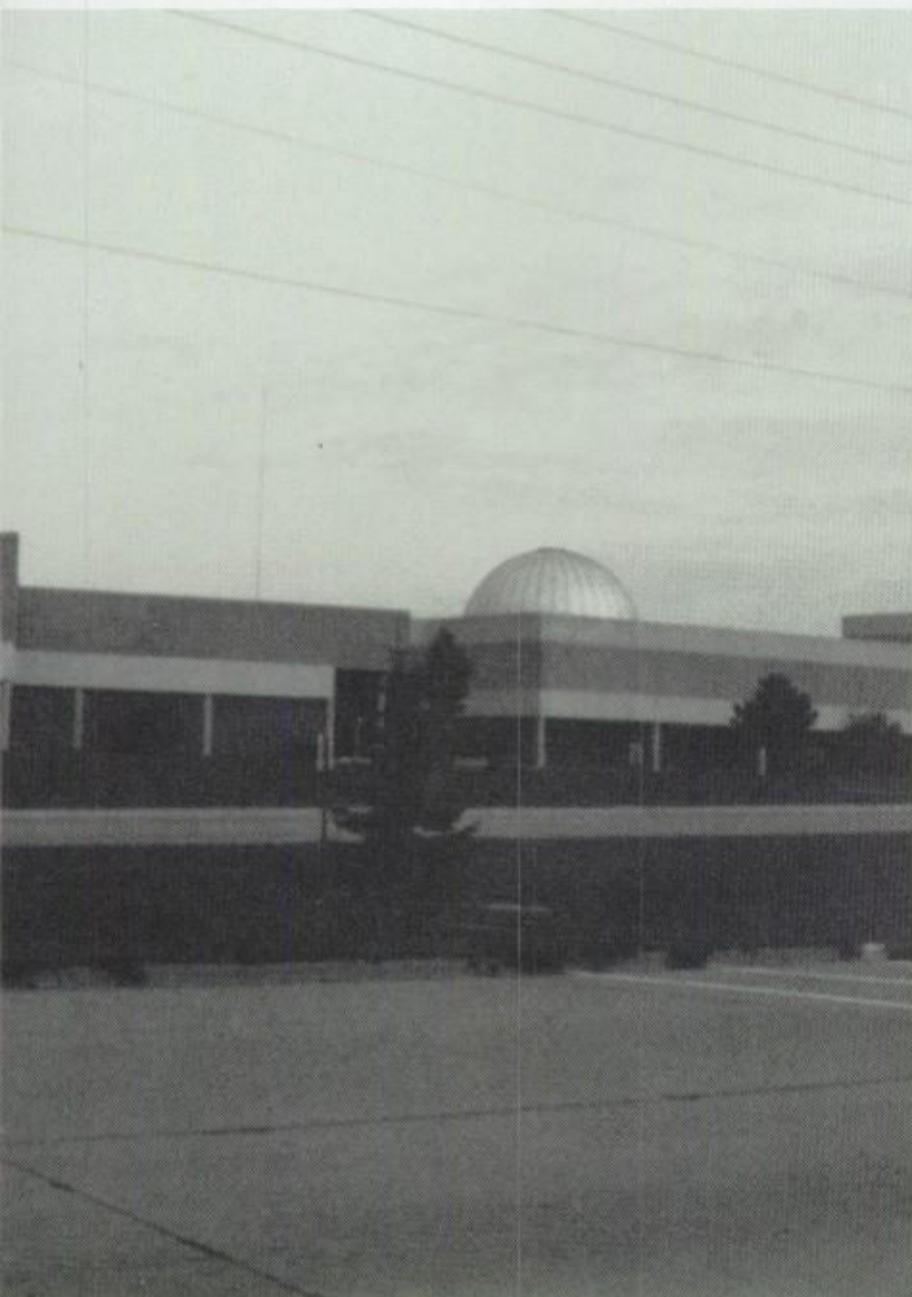

In the spring, first year biology students had a chance to go to Palmer Chiropractic College to view a preserved human body. The viewing, which was held on a Saturday, was only for volunteer students.

Students taking science courses in the future will have a lot to look forward to because of the many new advancements and opportunities available to them in the years to come.

Our planetarium is only one of 500 in the country.

Below: B.H.S. planetarium directors Mr. Peter Sweedy and Mr. Don Shaefer.

Planetarium makes BHS unique

What do Bettendorf, Waterloo and over half of 1000 other locations across the United States all have in common?

They all have planetariums. Some are in elementary, middle, or high schools, others are in colleges, universities, and museums. Still other are in very large facilities like Adler Planetarium in Chicago.

"The room, the dome, and the seats were all built in 1972 then we got the star projector in the fall of 1973," stated planetarium director Don Shaefer.

The Planetarium was purchased with a grant from the NDEA (National Defense Education Act) Title three program which covered 36% of the $98,000 cost then the Bettendorf school system paid the remaining $78,000.

"This same planetarium would cost between $150,000 to $200,000 today," he explained. Besides the original $78,000, $3,000 is paid for the PMA (Preventive Maintenance Agreement). This insurance only covers electronics and the basic instruments, but this agreement doesn't cover sound or projection.

Each year they get a three day visit from a technician who repairs equipment that is not working properly. If the repairs take longer than the three day limit the technician is paid $500 for each additional day.

Since the planetarium's 10 year christening approximately 7,000 students and teachers have used it each year. After this year 70,000 students and teachers will have utilized these facilities.

"The Planetarium is used by all grade levels in the school system," said Shaefer.

"It is a very good teaching tool it can show what actually happens to the sky instead of just telling what happens," he concluded.

All of the programs used by the planetarium have their costs covered with funds from The Hansen Planetarium in Salt Lake City, Utah, The Foundation for Humanities, The American Chemical Society, or NASA (The National Aeronautics Space Administration). Without these funds the programs would cost thousands of dollars instead of $100 to $200.

All of these programs must be modified in some way with the use of various types of equipment in the planetarium. It takes 50 to 100 hours to modify a 45 to 50 minute program that is partially completed and up to 100 to 150 hours for a one hour program if the planetarium produces it.

Throughout the planetarium's 10 year existence it has become more than a unique facility it has become a unique teaching tool.

Social Studies grows with time

Ah, Social Studies, the class where just about every teacher you had gave you the same speech about how the past can help you understand the present and make the future better. Maybe they were right.

Every BHS student has taken American History, a freshmen requirement. This is the class where Warergare, World War II and the Louisiana Purchase were discussed.

"I liked Mr. Meador's stories" laughed Junior Steve Schenkelberg, referring to the baseball bat that Meador, an American History teacher had.

The story behind the bat, is this: when Meador was teaching a number of years ago, if a student got out of line Meador would hit them with the bat. The person would then sign their name on the bat.

You may have noticed that a lot of visual aides were used in the Social Studies department. The usual video tapes, films, and film strips.

They showed more of those in Social Studies than any other department in the school, excluding Drivers Ed.

There was a new addition to the Social Studies department this year, his name is Mr. Jay Swords, who completed his first teaching. Swords had nothing but good comments about BHS. He said it is "the greatest thing since sliced bread and the students were naturally good compared to where I student taught."

Take a backpacking trip in Missouri? Well that's what Environmental Encounters did. This class was different from regular Social Studies classes. "I like the outdoors and wanted to learn more about it" said Senior Craig Visser.

Each student is required to take five semesters of Social Studies, to graduate American History, World History, and American government, also offered to upper classmen were sociology, psychology, economics, and comparative government.

Sociology and psychology had the best enrollment according to Mr. Jack Blake, Head of the Social Studies department.

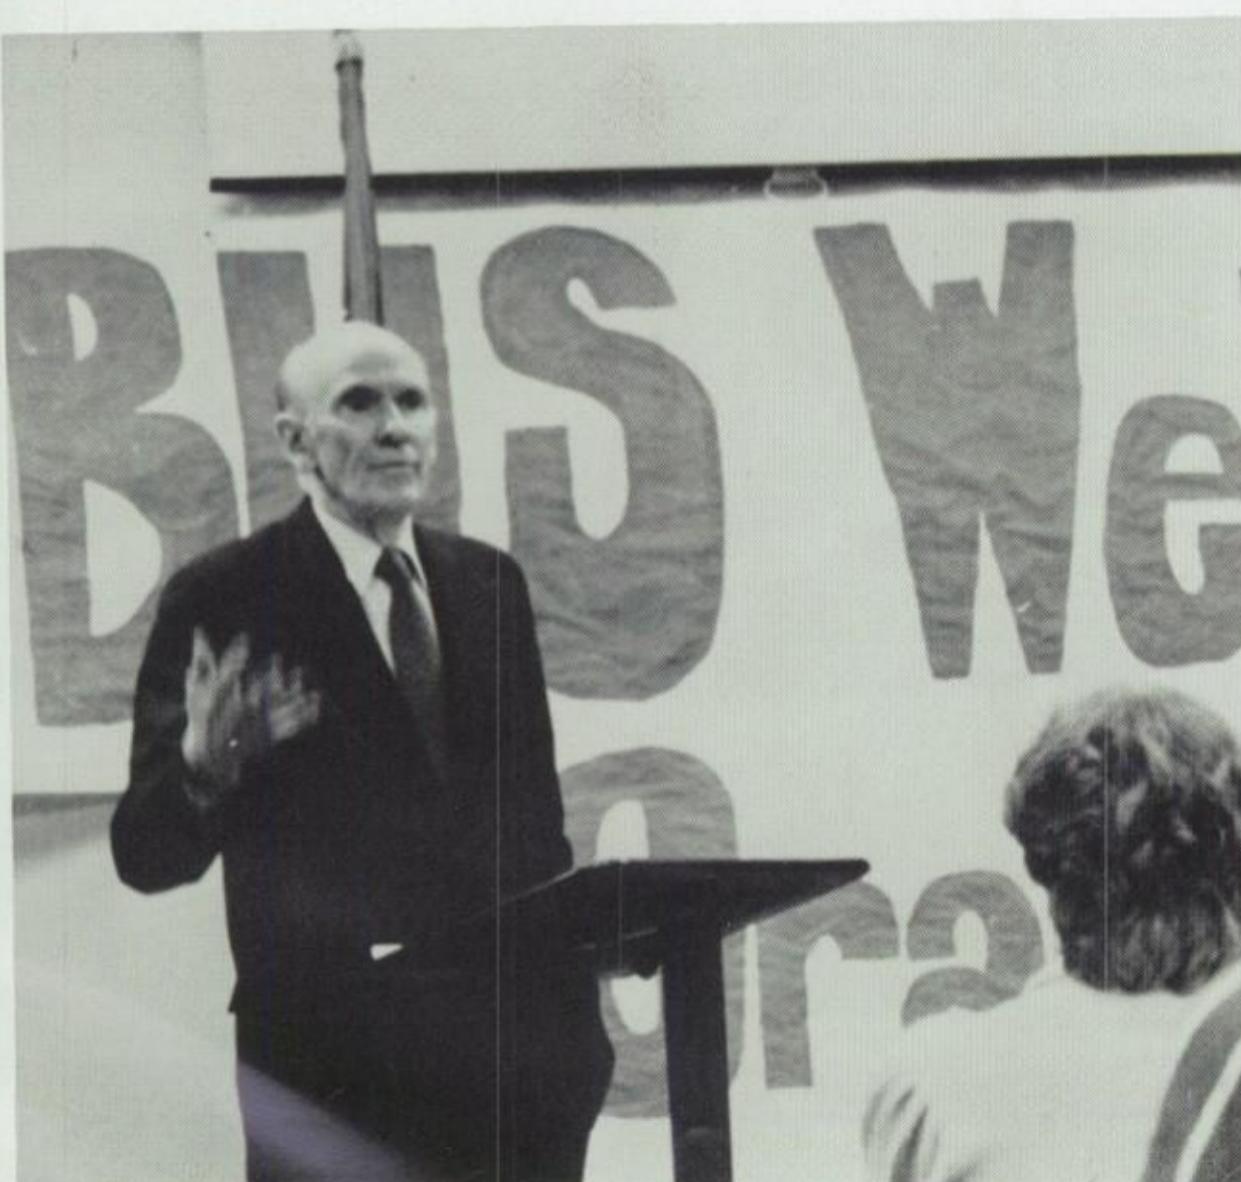

Social Studies can be very interesting, and the more history is being added every minute, making Social Studies an even more interesting subject as time goes on. What will they be saying about us in the future?

We at Buckets-N-Brass want you to know what we are all about and that we offer the finest quality in hand crafted brass and dependable service.

Our reproductions are not mass produced, they are made by hand, one piece at a time just as were the originals. Minor imperfections (sand hole, inclusions, dimensional differences) are inherent in the process, just as they were when the antiques were made. Quality is a matter of subjective judgement based on overall appearance. These products are intended for the customer who appreciates craftsmanship years behind the times.

The Feelings That Joined Us

High school was more than a place to learn. It was a place to start on your future. Here you met friends, joined clubs, participated in athletics and acquired knowledge. Even though the year has come to an end, we will remember the good times and friends with whom we shared our innermost feelings.

Feelings of disappointment . . . placing second in girl's cross country and boy's swimming . . . losing Mrs. Grace Smith to retirement, a fine teacher serving Bettendorf many years.

Feelings of relief . . . knowing you had enough credits to graduate when you are handed your diploma . . . handing in your term paper and giving that final speech . . .

Feelings of fear . . . knowing there are men in Berlin protecting American Ideals . . . seeing "The Day After" and finding out what can really happen in a nuclear war, and wondering if it will ever happen . . .

Feelings of pressure . . . getting yourself prepared for college and living away from home . . . find your first job . . .

Feelings of pride . . . knowing you attended one of the most prestigious learning facilities in Iowa . . . having a dedicated faculty that cares about its students and experiences . . . all the feelings that joined us together.

Senior Brad Fox models his latest hairstyle after state swimming. Brad was one of the many swimmers who got a new hairstyle during the swimming season.

Seniors Tony Quinones and Kevin Jandt are joined by a friend.

Here is the staff that brought you the 1984 Beacon. Although it took a lot of time to put the book together, we feel the time spent was well worth it. We hope you enjoy the book as much as we enjoyed putting it together, as you can see it made some of us a little crazy.
